$25,000 Granted Subway

Mayor Blatchford Wires Government Increases Donation

WORK TO BEGIN AT EARLY DATE

Structure With Approaches Will Have Length of 580 Feet

Ample money for the 109th street subway is assured. Mayor Blatchford telegraphed today from Ottawa that the federal department of railways has promised $25,000 in place of the original $15,000. A new amendment is being added to the act to cover the increased grant.

With the financial obstacles out of the way the improvement will be rushed. Plans are now nearly ready City Engineer Haddow reports, and it will not be long until bids will be asked for and the actual work started.

Will Cost $200,000

Around $200,000 is the estimated cost of the subway. This will be made up as follows: $25,000 from the Federal government, $30,000 from the Hudson's Bay Co., and $95,000 surplus left from the 101st street subway. Edmonton ratepayers already had voted for a $100,000 overhead foot bridge at Ninth street, but was considered inadequate and was not built.

The new subway will have the same traffic capacity as the High Level bridge and together with the approaches will be 580 feet long. There will be no recesses of any sort in the span.

HALCYON DAYS OF OLD TIMERS ARE REVIVED

More Than 1000 Persons Attend Celebration at Pavilion

RED RIVER JIG GREAT ATTRACTION

"Fiddlers Three" Replace Orchestra While Big Event Is Held

When Peter Gunn gave the signal Friday night at the Riverview pavilion for the Old Timer's dance to start, fully 300 took the floor for a waltz quadrille while at least 800 others looked on. Edmonton's pioneers had, for the first time invited the public to share their good times and the public "Came, saw and was conquered".

The dance was advertised as half old time and half modern and fulfilled every expectation. Tipp's superb dance orchestra played everything from "Turkey in the Straw", to "Yes, Yes, She's My Baby", and every type of dancing was seen or participated in during the evening.

COAL FAMINE IS MENACING GT. BRITAIN

International Miners Will Tighten Embargo Against England

Special Bulletin Cable

BRUSSELS, June 5—Meeting here Friday night to discuss measures for supporting the striking miners of Great Britain, delegates to the emergency convention of the International Miners' Federation unanimously decided to continue the help decided on for their comrades: placing an embargo on coal entering Britain.

It was pointed out that the embargo had so far proved effective as little coal had reached Britain.

Flies to Meeting

A. J. Cook, secretary of the British Miners' Federation flew to the convention by airplane and brought with him a letter from Evan Williams, chairman of the Mine Owners' Association, containing a suggestion designed to end the coal strike, but this communication was not discussed by the convention.

It is understood that negotiations in London are at a standstill. The communication sent the convention here by Evan Williams proposes that the miners and mine owners get together by means of small committees in an attempt to end the strike. The miners are entering the sixth week of the strike and most of them as well as their families are suffering severely.

TAX ON GAMBLING IS OPPOSED BY BRITISH CLERICS

Bulletin Special Cable

LONDON, June 5—Declaring that a betting tax would encourage gambling, a delegation of churchmen waited on Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, asking that the proposed tax be not exacted.

The chancellor informed the delegation that in his opinion one billion dollars a year was bet by the British public, of which some eighty-five millions was legal betting on the race courses through bookmakers. The tax applied to the legal betting. He thought that the tax would decrease betting materially and poined out that the new act in no way extended the limits of legal betting.

Due to the time taken in counting and auditing, it is not expected that final figures will be available until Tuesday of next week.

HOUSE PUTS OFF CONSIDERATION OF HUDSON BAY RLY.

Exclusive to Bulletin

OTTAWA, June 5—Sir Henry Drayton voiced strong opposition to the vote of $3,000,000 for the Hudson Bay railway being considered in the house of commons Friday. Many interested members, said Sir Henry, were absent. Hon. C. A. Dunning, minister of railways and canals, replied that he had previously intimated that the item would be under discussion on Friday.

Mr. Dunning pointed out that a week's notice of the discussion had been given but rather than create the impression that he was not in favor of a full argument agreed to let the matter stand over, but said it was unfortunate that the business of the country should have to be halted to allow the interested members to attend a political meeting at Montreal.

Mayor's Attack on Laborites Starts Tempest in Winnipeg

Local Newspapers Score Chief Magistrate for Hot Words Used

Exclusive to Bulletin

WINNIPEG, June 5—Mayor Webb has stirred up a tempest in a teapot that does not appear to be in prospect of immediate settlement, owing to the disposition of labor leaders and the local papers to keep it stirred.

Following the visit of a labor delegation to Attorney General Craig on Friday, both the Tribune and Free Press published editorials in which his worship was taken to task. The Free Press returns to the attack this morning and says:

"The chief magistrate of a city pledged to the observance of law and order should not go around talking about throwing into the Red River citizens who annoy him. Everything is wrong with this kind of talk."

On the other hand, bankers and business executives, who prefer not to be quoted, say the mayor was justified and the Retail Merchants Association has passed a resolution in which they commend the mayor for his attitude.

A formal letter of appreciation to the management of the Exhibition was received from the Edmonton Museum of Arts following the announcement of this attraction.

FIRE IN KILN MISTAKEN FOR THE REAL THING

POLITICAL CAMPAIGN IN MEDICINE HAT HAS SLOWED DOWN

MEDICINE HAT, June 5. — The Agricultural Society's carnival, which is in full swing here this week, has slowed up election activities, but they are expected to start with a rush next week. So far only one meeting has been held in this riding.

Office hours for the civic block have been changed to 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., excepting Saturdays, when the time is 8:30 p.m. to 12 noon. This arrangement is effective from June 5 to Sept. 4.

MATCH COMPLETE SUPERIORITY TEST

Competition Is First One Ever Staged for the Ryder Cup

Special Bulletin Cable

VIRGINIA WATER, England, June 5.—Great Britain today won the Ryder cup in the first competition for this trophy for team play between American and British professional golfers.

The British victory was virtually a rout, for the American professionals at no time showed any promise of even being in the race.

After sweeping the Americans down to defeat in all the foursome matches yesterday, the Britons again showed superiority today.

Walter Hagen went down to defeat at the hands of George Duncan, giving the British six points in their total score. Then Jim Barnes fell prey to Abe Mitchell's flawless golf. Next Fred McLeod was beaten by Arthur Havers, ten up and nine to play, and this gave the British eight of the possible fifteen points and victory.

WATER FREE OF BACTERIA

City Mains Tested Repeatedly Within Past Seven Days

The muddy water in the city mains has been tested repeatedly within the past week and the bacterial test is comparatively low, reports Dr. Whitelaw, city health chief.

"The bad color of the water is from vegetable matter and is experienced every spring," continues the doctor. "Unfortunately this cannot be removed by chlorine. The mud in the water can be avoided by added sediment basins at the filtration plant and better facilities are absolutely necessary.

"Snow in the mountains is liable to cause more muddy water in August and we are always sure of it in the spring," he concluded.

Aimee Is Not In City

"Inspector" Middleton's Hot Tip Fails to Stand Test

TOURIST'S IDENTITY IS MISTAKEN

Mrs. Blanche Potter Bears No Resemblance to Mrs. McPherson

Paul E. O'Brien, president of the Pasadena Tourist Club and well known California newspaper man, says that Mrs. Blanche Potter, Los Angeles artist now in Edmonton, who is alleged by "Inspector" Middleton, private detective agency head, to be Aimee Semple McPherson, missing Los Angeles evangelist, is not the missing woman.

"I know Aimee Semple McPherson. I have shaken hands with her a score of times and there is not the slightest resemblance to Mrs. Potter, whom I have also known for a number of years," said O'Brien today.

"It is the most infamous story that I have heard of in years," said Mr. O'Brien. "Mrs. McPherson is a big woman, weighing perhaps 180 pounds with auburn hair and lots of it and looks no more like Blanche Potter than I look like the angel Gabriel."

No Resemblance

Mrs. Potter, who is a Californian artist with a studio in Los Angeles, is a frail little woman of 49, with greying hair and without the slightest resemblance to the pictures of the missing evangelist. She arrived in Edmonton on May 28 after driving up from Los Angeles, and came here to be the head artist at the Alberta Art Studios being opened on [illegible] street by J. H. Gould and associates. Although she started from Los Angeles with a sub-artist, Miss Phillips, the latter left her at Tulare, California, and Mrs. Potter then came on to Leduc alone.

It was at Leduc that "Inspector" Middleton picked up the trail and sent out the telegrams telling a

JAMES A. CODE TORY NOMINEE

Is Unanimous Choice at Convention in Camrose

CAMROSE, Alta., June 5—James A. Code, businessman of the town of Camrose, was the unanimous choice of the Conservatives of the Camrose constituency to carry their banner as a candidate to contest the riding in the coming provincial election. No other name was placed before the Conservative convention held in Camrose Friday evening.

With four candidates now in the field there is every possibility that the period between now and the election date will develop one of the most keenly fought provincial political campaigns this constituency has ever experienced.

The four contestants now in the field are: J. A. Code, Camrose, Conservative; Hon. Vernor W. Smith, present member for the riding in the Farmers' government; Walter A. Cunningham, Kelsey, Liberal; A. D. Campbell, Camrose, Liberal-Progressive.

MONTGOMERY WILL RUN IN WETASKIWIN

Gets Unanimous Nomination at Convention of Liberals

NEW OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

Captain J. T. Shaw Scores U.F.A. Government in Hot Speech

Exclusive to Bulletin

WETASKIWIN, June 5.—H. J. Montgomery, mayor of Wetaskiwin and former representative in the legislature, was the unanimous choice of the Liberal convention here Friday afternoon. The convention was well attended, nearly every polling subdivision in the constituency being represented.

The election of officers resulted in V. C. French being reelected president, Wm. Thirsk, first vice-president, Dr. N. A. Johnson, second vice-president, and J. J. Christopher, secretary-treasurer.

Scores U. F. A.

W. F. Puffer, candidate for the Lacombe constituency, was the first speaker and he defended the legislation of the governments prior to the year 1921 and compared the work they had accomplished, such as the erection of the parliament buildings, the hospital at Ponoka, the court houses throughout the provinces, etc., with the reckless extravagance of the Progressives, who have little or nothing to show for their large expenditures.

He had been an active U. F. A. worker until they entered politics, but he could not agree with their policy of permitting and encouraging large numbers of farmers who were not naturalized citizens, nor will many of them become naturalized, to vote for delegates to conventions and other gatherings and thus help to select the men who are endeavoring to govern this country. He strenuously objected to aliens running the government.

Capt. Shaw Speaks

Captain J. T. Shaw, leader of the Liberal party in the province, complimented the gathering in unanimously choosing so able and experienced a man as Mr. Montgomery who, as chairman of the municipal law committee when he was a member of the house, had rendered valuable service to the province. Mr. Shaw then referred to the record of the Farmer government and analyzed their administration during their term of office, showing where there had been a deficit of nearly $5,000,000 during the first four years of their regime and the so-called surplus of some $185,000 was largely a matter of bookkeeping, and had been shown during the election year.

The Progressive government could not produce one single piece of sound, sane, constructive legislation during the five years they were in office. They had done a lot of tinkering with the statutes, passing about three hundred new acts, and amending many more, but through lack of courage or ability, or both, they really did nothing.

No Problems Solved

They had entirely failed to solve the big problems of government, but the expenditure had increased by leaps and bounds, and now they were endeavoring to throw the responsibility for the financial conditions on their predecessors. They had failed to give relief from taxation, but on the other hand had added to the economic burden by increasing many forms of taxation and were looking around for other things on which to impose taxes.

The speaker stated that there were too many legislators in the house, and suggested a scheme for a scientifically planned redistribution. He also referred briefly to agricultural problems, transportation and immigration, while he went rather exhaustively into the matter of education and health, pointing out that the educational affairs of this province had deteriorated since the Farmer government took office.

Mr. Shaw gave a very impressive address, and there is a strong likelihood that Wetaskiwin constituency will send a Liberal representative to the next legislature.

on chairs. Cries of "Suke, boy", which means "go to it boy", to modern hockey and baseball encouragement terms urged the jiggers on and the situation grew so delirious that one member of the orchestra threw down his horn and jumped into the competition.

Two distinct competitions, with cash prizes, were held. Cyril La-Boucher and Mrs. Alexis Belcourt were declared winners in one and Larent L'Hirondell and Mrs. Ben Belcourt in the other. They came from Lac Ste Anne, and were more or less professionals.

Pioneer Dancer Chered

The first local dancers to step into place were Alex Pritchard of the South Side with Mrs. Henry Fraser. Loud cheers greeted Mr. Pritchard who is 73 years old and who was born five miles out of Winnipeg as was his father.

Jiggers came fast and furious from then on and included, Bill West and Mrs. Maroney, Campbell Young, Mrs. J. C. Fraser, Mrs. James Gibbons and scores of others. Peter Gunn himself took a turn at the steps.

For the jig special "fiddlers three" were imported. Fiddlers for this work have not only to play fast and long, but has to do double duty by also using their feet as drums. They had plenty of resin for their bows and used it freely. Mrs. Wm. Howey accompanied them on the piano. In the jig the women dance only with the feet, but the men are given every freedom and it is a great dance to watch and takes real western constitutions to go through with.

Young Dancers Excel

Just to show that the jig is not a lost art, Miss Cellas Gibbons, granddaughter of one of the city's oldest old-timers, Jim Gibbons, and Adolph Calahoo, grandson of Chief Calahoo, went onto the floor and by their agility and grace drew shout after shout from the sidelines.

Rapidly following the first series of jigs was a most pleasing and vivacious interpretation of the ultra-modern Charleston by Miss Evelyn Anderson, a captivating Miss of the city.

Great applause was given Miss Lillian Dawson, who sang, "Cecelia," with "Give Me a Little Kiss' as an encore. Miss Dawson is a Western Canada girl who has made a big impression with her singing at the Empress theatre.

Square Dances Called

Ed. Broder and A. H. Wingfield took turns in calling the square dances.

Among the out-of-town old-timers present were Frank Lucas, a real pioneer from Wetaskiwin, who says he will never miss any of the old-time doings here if he can help it.

Israel Umbaugh and five of his family were in from Stony Plain. "There were just 12 buildings in Edmonton when I came here," said Mr. Umbaugh," and you could put them all inside this dancing hall." Mr. Umbaugh was accompanied Friday night by Mr. and Mrs. Mert McKinley.

"I came here before they built the mountains, and am still going strong," declared Dr. A. E. Porter. He was one of the first physicians to settle west of Manitoba and came in 1878. Mrs. Porter assisted in arrangements for the dance.

Old-Timers Are Young

"I came down to see the old-timersers but find lots of young-timers," remarked ex-Governor Leedy, of Kansas, who has been a farmer in the Whitecourt district for some time, but now lives in Edmonton.

Bill West, former president of the association, assisted by Geo. Thompson, did duty at the front door, Peter Gunn, assisted by Jimmy Reilly, Mrs. Bill Howey and Mrs. J. Sutherland, managed the floor.

Among those in attendance were Campbell Young, president; Howard Douglas, secretary; Mrs. Jim Gibbons, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Little, Mrs. Sibbold, K. A. McLeod, Mrs. A. W. Ormsby, Mrs. D. R. Fraser, J. J. McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Morris, Mrs. Col. Belcher and John McDonald.

Henry Fraser, born here 73 years ago, was the "oldest-timer" present.

Topographical survey work in the mountain park district of the foothills west of Edmonton will be carried on in the vicinity of Lovett by a party of seven headed by J. W. Spence of Ottawa, who is now in the city getting his party together.

COMMUNICABLE ILLS DECLINING

Measles and Whooping Cough Lead, With Mumps in Fourth Place

Communicable diseases in the city are declining rapidly. Only 93 cases were reported to the city health department for the week ended June 3, as compared to 129 for the previous week.

Measles is in the lead with 56, whooping cough 15, German measles 10, mumps 5, tuberculosis 4, scarlet fever 2, chickenpox 2 and erysipelas 1. Tuberculosis or consumption is a disease not prevalent in Edmonton, explains City Health Chief Douglas, and the four cases reported last week came to the hospitals from outside the city.

There were but 23 deaths reported from consumption in the city last year and the majority of those were persons not native to Edmonton.

LABOR SITUATION IN ALBERTA IS REPORTED GOOD

Walter Smitten, labor commissioner for Alberta, stated Friday that labor conditions all over the province are better than they were a year ago. More men are being placed this year and female labor is scarce.

For the week ending May 29 there were 354 unplaced male applicants, 173 fewer than in the corresponding week a year ago. In this week there were 868 applicants, 64 more than in the same week of 1925. This satisfactory state from a worker's standpoint also holds good so far as the emuployers are concerned. Only 11 unfilled vacancies remained while a year ago there were 141.

Continuing, Mr. Smitten stated that this is the "off season" for farm labor. Seeding has been completed and haying has not yet started. There is a normal demand for workers on railways.

How Weak Girls Can Gain Strength

It Comes Through the Tonic Blood-Making Qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

In the life of almost every girl there comes a time when weakness attacks her. The strain upon her blood supply becomes too great, and there follows headaches and backaches, loss of appetite, attacks of dizziness, heart palpitation and constant weariness and a tendency to a decline. All these symptoms may not be present in any particular case, but the presence of any one of them shows the necessity for prompt treatment. And there is no other treatment so sure and so speedy as that through the blood-making qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are the one thing needed to maintain the health of growing girls and women of mature years.

Here is a bit of positive proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in cases of this kind. Miss Clara Fraser, Thessalon, Ont., has been brought back to health and strength through the timely use of this medicine, and gives expression of her gratitude as follows:—"I feel it a duty as well as a pleasure to tell you what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me. They have restored me to health, if, indeed, they did not save my life. I was suffering greatly from anaemia. I lost flesh and always felt tired and nervous. At last I grew so weak I had to remain in bed. The doctor did not seem to help me any and I was growing weaker, and my heart was bothering me. At last a friend who called to see me said she had read of a similar case restored by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and urged me to try them. I felt helpless but decided to take her advice, so my mother got me a supply of the pills and I began taking them. It was not long before I began to find benefit from the use of the pills, and in less than two months my health was restored. In fact I was in better health than I had ever enjoyed before. I strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all who are weak and run down, for I feel sure they will not be disappointed."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD STAGES WARM SESSION

Centralization of Commercial Education Under Discussion

Unable to make progress after debating an hour and ten minutes on the question of centralization of commercial education in Edmonton, the Edmonton public school board meeting last night broke up suddenly in the midst of oratorical chaos when Trustee Bellamy moved an adjournment which was supported by the majority of the board.

The meeting finished at 10.05 p.m.—one of the earliest adjournments on record—with a considerable amount of unfinished business.

Resolutions Offered

In a preliminary effort to organize the class rooms for the 1926-27 school year the school management committee brought in a resolution that the McDougall Commercial High school be accommodated on the second floor of the McDougall public school building. This resolution was followed by another which recommended that the commercial classes on the South Side be accommodated in the three rooms at the west end of the third floor of the Garneau Public school building. The first resolution was finally carried.

A snag was struck in the second resolution of the school management committee and after much argument Trustee Bellamy suddenly stood up and said: "Mr. Chairman, I move an adjournment. I'm not going to stand for any of this." The meeting was over in three seconds.

Leave of Absence

Before the final break the board supported a motion of Trustee Roper that the conference committee of the board be instructed to meet representatives of the Edmonton High School Teachers' association to discuss the board's policy with regard to leave of absence of teachers. This case also provided a conflict during which Trustee Adair accused Trustee Roper of being out to grab a few votes from school teachers for himself. The discussion became unmanageable until Chairman MacPherson called for order. Those voting for Trustee Roper's motion were Roper, Mrs. Bishop, and Dr. Crang; against Dr. MacPherson and Jos. Adair.

Leave of absence was granted to Sybil Robertson for one year; Muriel Robertson for one year; Ada L. Wight, for six months; Margaret Fife, for two weeks.

Mrs. S. A. G. Barnes will continue as a teacher in the public schools, two members of the board voting against her continued employment.

Stop Signs Extolling Ham Are Installed

Forty traffic signs commanding the motoring public to "Stop" and then going on to extol the virtues of certain hams, etc., have been placed throughout the city by the Trans-Canada Advertising Company under contract with the city and an application has been made to install more. The city commissioners have said no more as many people have protested and it is thought that some of the signs will have to be transferred to places where the property owners will be more appreciative.

DRILLERS TOP SPEED RECORD

Emerald Oil Company's Well Down 1,550 Feet in Seven Days

Breaking all records for one day's drilling in the Wainwright field, and also setting new records for seven-day drilling, the Emerald Oil Company's well was down 1550 feet on Thursday afternoon which marked the end of their first week's drilling. Good indications have been met with, and the company expects to be in production sands at about 2100 feet.

Pat Adams, Frank Stevens and Hugh Adams, the firm named two of the successful drillers of the Edmonton-Wainwright well, are in charge of the Emerald operations are three towers are being worked, giving a continuous 24-hours drilling with a rotary drill.

A disco-dip, one of the latest appliances used in rotary drilling, was sent out to the well a few days ago and using this apparatus the drillers believe they will make footage of from 350 to 400 feet every 24 hours.

Travelling from early each morning until 9 o'clock at night, four days were required by Edward Noble of Dalehurst and Walter W. Rutter of Edmonton, fur trappers, to get their winter's catch 150 miles down the Athabasca river from Dalehurst to Whitecourt. Forty moose and several deer were seen during the four-day trip down stream. The fur catch this year in the Entrance and Edson districts has been heavy, they report, nearly 22 foxes and 200 coyotes falling to one party of five with which Noble was trapping.

PROTEST AGAINST FACTORY PERMIT FAILS IN COURT

Mr. Justice Ives Friday dismissed the action brought by Eleanor Jane Smith against the Coutts Machinery Company and the City of Edmonton in so far as it concerned the city.

Plaintiff claimed that Section 159 of one of the city bylaws stated that factories and other concerns the material from which might cause or promote fires were only to be erected in isolated cases and under conditions prescribed by the building inspector and that in granting a permit to the Coutt's company to erect on lot 17, block 33 a property immediately adjoining that of the plaintiff, lot 18, block 33 a foundry or machine factory the blaw had been breached.

SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1926.

Proof of Good Times.

Canada, it is said, during May made a new monthly record in the amount of building done and arranged for. That is proof of a convincing kind that the tide has not only turned but that it is flowing strong. People do not tie up money in houses or business blocks unless they think the investment will be profitable. Nor unless they have or can secure the money with which to finance the operations. A very large proportion of the building done in Canada is done with borrowed money. The inference is that the loan companies are again letting money out freely, which they would not do unless the times were good and gave promise of remaining good.

A Good Loser.

If Mr. Churchill's tax on betting has come into effect the proceeds from Derby day should go a good way to make up the cost of combatting the general strike. A people who can wager such a huge sum on a horse race may justly claim that they are not financially so nearly "down and out" as some times represented.

The Derby has long since come to rank as one of the institutions of Britain. Not the least interesting feature of which is the regularity with which "the talent" back the wrong horse. John Bull does not differ from other people in the ability to make a bad guess as to which horse is going to run the faster. But he does seem to stand alone in his willingness to keep on year after year paying for his mistakes.

Boost the Fair.

The Exhibition Association are "broadening out" this year in the effort to induce a larger attendance from outside points. An energetic advertising campaign is being carried on; and free admission tickets are being distributed among school children throughout the district. These are steps in the right direction. The fair must be more than an Edmonton fair. The consistent aim has been to make it an exhibition that would worthily represent the progress and development of central and northern Alberta, and that would appeal to the interest and support of the people of this entire part of the province. That is the larger view which the management evidently have in mind in making an even stronger effort than usual to arouse attention beyond the city in the coming event. In this the association deserve the approval and the active support of the townspeople; for these are all share-holders and guarantors of the enterprise, and all affected, directly or indirectly, as the fair is made "bigger and better."

As to Redistribution.

Premier Brownlee says if the Government is sustained there will be a redistribution of the seats in the Legislature immediately following the election. It is recalled that a similar promise was made before the last election. Redistribution was proposed in 1923, but the Government opposed it and nothing came of the proposal. Meantime it has abolished one constituency and carved up two others to suit the requirements of political exigency. That is the redistribution record of the five years that the Government has been in power, when redistribution was as plainly called for as it is at present.

And what would be the advantage to the public of redistributing the seats after the election has taken place? The only effect of that would be to destroy the representative standing of every member whose constituency was altered: probably a majority of the total, perhaps every member in the House. The time to redistribute seats is before an election, not after. The Government held, with some reason, that a proper redistribution could not be made at the recent session because a census had not been taken since 1921. But the Ministers insisted on chopping up one section of the map and framing a couple of pocket boroughs for their own advantage. If that is the kind of redistribution they propose to perpetrate on a wholesale scale it is another excellent reason why they should not be returned.

Another Pledge Sent to the Discard.

What was called the Reconstructive Legislative Program of the U.F.A. was the "platform" upon which the present Provincial Government got into power in 1921. That was the program which the U.F.A. candidates pledged themselves to carry into effect if they were allowed to set up a Government.

Clause 3 of this program reads as follows: "Adequate notice. That 30 days' public notice be given before issuing the writ for any provincial election." That meant that about sixty days would elapse between the announcement that a bye-election or a general election was to be held and the actual casting of the ballots.

When did the Greenfield-Brownlee Government ever give thirty days' public notice, or public notice of any kind, before issuing the writ for a bye-election? As for the present general election, the writ was issued without notice of that many minutes.

No Government ever did or ever could exercise, with more scrupulous disregard to the above pledge, it prerogative to withhold the date of an election until the writ was issued. Every election this Government has held has been held in open and direct violation of this clause in the program with which it came into power.

One of two things is true. The pledges in the Reconstructive Legislative program were only made to get in on, and it was never the intention of their authors that they should be carried into effect. Or else the Greenfield-Brownlee Government has broken faith with the party to which it owes it existance.

THE PLEASANT TASK

He would not do the thing called work
Unless the task were pleasant.
His duty must not bind and irk,
Joy must be ever-present;
And so he searched the city through
To find the job he'd like to do.

Now there's a chasm which divides
Man's working from his playing
And one can't occupy both sides,
Which goes without my saying;
There is no job on earth today
Which pleases one so well as play.

The thing we really like to do
Is seldom honest toiling.
It's seeing irksome duties through
Which keeps the kettle boiling;
And if it's work, beyond a doubt,
Somewhere it calls for courage stout.

And so from post to post he went,
To find a job which suited,
But everywhere in discontent
Away from tasks he scooted;
He wanted work which seems like play,
And that does not exist today.

Do You Remember?

FORTY YEARS AGO

From the Edmonton Bulletin, Saturday, May 29th, 1886.

Last week Sgt. Gordon and Constable Baker left for the south in chase of "Cracker-box" Johnson and Gallagher who escaped from custody here some time ago. The ex-prisoners were travelling with a freighter named Scott. Gordon and Baker caught up with the outfit Wednesday night some distance north of the Lone Pine. The men they were after were sleeping in the woods. As there was little chance of finding them in the dark Gordon told Scott to say nothing about their visit and to bring the men with him in the morning as usual; otherwise he would be arrested. They then rode on to the Lone Pine stopping place. When Scott drove up to the stopping place on Thursday morning the fugitives were with him. Gordon and Baker threw open the door and ordered "hands up" before Johnson and Gallagher knew what was coming. Both had revolvers but it was too late to draw them, and they submitted to be once more gathered into the fold. They were handcuffed and brought back to Miller's stopping place that night. On Saturday the party took dinner at Barnett's. During dinner the handcuffs were removed from one of each of the prisoners' wrists and both fastened on one wrist. Constable Baker carried his revolver stuck in the leg of his boot. After dinner, in accord with what was doubtless a concerted arrangement between Johnson and Gallagher, Johnson said to the policemen: "Come here and I'll show you a little trick with cards", at the same time walking towards a table in the corner of the room. Gordon and Baker turned to follow him, the former at the same time taking hold of his wrists to replace the handcuffs. Gallagher remained at the dinner table, and as Baker turned his back towards him to follow Johnson he made a jump and seized the revolver from the leg of Baker's boot. Johnson clenched with Gordon at the same moment while the latter tried to get hold of his revolver, which had slipped from its accustomed place, making it difficult to reach. Gallagher ordered Gordon to throw up his hands and on his not doing so fired two shots which passed between Gordon's arm and his body, cutting his clothes but not wounding him. He then held up his hands and Johnson took his revolver. The released prisoners then removed their handcuffs and compelled Barnett to put them on the policemen. They then took the police horses and outfit and struck south. Barnett, the owner of the stopping place, P. Miller and a man employed by Barnett who had lately arrived from the old country were present during the affray but did not interfere. The last mentioned took to the woods and had not put in an appearance next day when the police commissioner and party passed. Nothing has been seen or heard of Johnson or Gallagher since. Gordon and Baker arrived here with the commissioner's party on Monday. On Wednesday they were tried before the commissioner at Ft. Saskatchewan for having allowed their prisoners to escape and severely reprimanded for their carelessness. As a reminder for the future Gordon was reduced to the rank of corporal and Baker given four months in the guard room.

Pessimism which prevailed as a result of the previous statement has been greatly lessened by the new announcement.

INTELLECTUALS

There are a lot of writers in these unholy days, who pose as fearless fighters of everything we praise; man's faith they would be stealing, his higher hopes congealing, they jeer him when he's kneeling, they josh him when he prays. They laugh at all religion, at every gospel tale, from Noah and his pigeon to Jonah and his whale; the faith that's lived for ages, propounded by the sages, they scorn, in futile rages, as being false and stale. They live in ease and splendor, they have good grub to cook, they draw much legal tender for knocking on the Book; they draw a price gigantic from magazines romantic for proving preachers frantic, insane or on the crook. They do not have to struggle or starve in garrets cold; on cushions soft they snuggle and knock the speed laws cold; in gilded clubs they linger and haply crook a finger at one who is the bringer of cocktails manifold. Their lives are soft and slothful, they loaf the years away, and throw their wheezes mothful at those who watch and pray; all worshiping is fooling, all clergymen are drooling, philosophy is cooling all pious zeal, they say. If they some day were taken from fortune's kindly care, and found themselves forsaken in danger and despair, would they keep on their teaching, their atheistic preaching, some solace still beseeching from Ingersoll, Voltaire? If certain shipwreck faced them where angry billows roar, would arguments that braced them when they were safe ashore to peaceful havens steer them, would Huxley's lectures cheer them, or Darwin's chapters clear them of dread that made them sore? When man is fat and hearty, with three square meals a day, he's prone to be a smarty, and foolish things he'll say; but when misfortunes hound him, vicissitudes confound him, he, trembling, looks around him for gods to whom to pray.

For soliture sometimes is best society,
And short retirement urges sweet return.

Health Talks
BY DR. W. A. EVANS

HARMFUL DIETS

When McCollum and Simmonds were preparing to write their book, "Food, Nutrition and Health," they spent some time investigating eating habits. One day they lunched at a Y. M. C. A. cafeteria. They took a table near the food counter and spied on the girls as they passed by with their trays.

One had meat pie, stewed tomatoes, white muffins, and butter. A second had corn beef hash, mashed potatoes, succotash, cornbread and butter. A third, meat pie, raised biscuits, potato sala, and cocoa. A fourth beef croquettes, mashed potato, stewed tomato, bread, and butter. A fifth, stewed tomato, white flour muffins, cornbread, butter, currant pie, and lemonade.

Knowing something of what people of like kind had had for breakfast and would have for supper, the authors went back to their desks and wrote: "Many people wonder why it is that so many men and women begin to look old at 40 to 50 years. Why it is that their bones become so brittle as to break easily and why their teeth are so poor that they decay early." The answer is: "People are not taking the right combinations of food."

To the same cause they also ascribe overtire at the end of the day's work, "restlessness in the evening," "evenings of excitement and entertainment rather than rest and self-improvement."

But the answer means even more than the charge. They say to avoid this list of ills modify the diet as follows:—

"Eat approximately a quart of milk a day. Eat it in milk soups, cream vegetables, bread made with milk, puddings, custard, cottage cheese, butter, buttermilk, ice cream, cheese and milk.

'Eat a liberal serving of cooked greens at least once every day. Eat a salad twice a day."

'Eat what you want after you have eaten what you should."

This advice classes the three above named groups as foods which should be eaten. It assumes that the appetite will crave a proper amount of meat, bread, vegetables and fruit to supply calories, protein, minerals, and vitamines needed in addition to those found in milk and the leafy salads and greens.

Milk and greens they call protective foods, and they assume that our eating habits make us crave the energy and repair foods more.

This explanation, however, while it applies generally, needs to be modified at times. For instance, in the goiter belt sea foods and perhaps iodine salt should be added to the list of protective foods—those to be eaten because they "should be," rather than because they are 'wanted." In the winter and spring times the antiscorbutic fruits and vegetables are protective foods. However, fruits are pronounced "the most attractive in appearance and flavor. No others furnish so great a variety of flavors."

In a pellagra region Goldberger would class lean meat and yeast as protective foods. There are those who say that so much of the spring pains, neuragia, and rheumatism are due to a slight beriberi tendency and that bran and whole grain breads and cereals should also be on the list of protective foods, especialy in the springtime.

FASCISM AND THE STRIKE

Rome Secolo: Great Britain, which used to be considered a model of order and political sagacity, has become the battlefield of all manner of destructive forces just like any Latin country which could not count on that long tradition, so proudly vaunted by England, of liberty and parliamentary institutions. The principle of representative government has become the inevitable principle of decay. . . . Fascism and its leader will go down in history as having substituted for the destructive electoral principle the constructive principle of governmental authority and having thus arrested the destruction of the Italian people.

Cathedral Will Be Beautiful Edifice When Completed

His Grace Archbishop O'Leary Laid Cornerstone of St. Joseph's Cathedral on November 2, 1924—Will Be of Gothic Style

It was mainly due to His Grace Archbishop O'Leary that in 1924 work was started on the present cathedral, and His Grace laid the corner stone and blessed it on November 2 of the same year.

It is to be of Gothic style of architecture of the decorated period, with one noble tower at the crossing of the nave and transepts with a tapering spire rising to the height of 220 feet, while on the east end will be two smaller towers with spires 190 feet from the ground. The main entrance will also be at the east end with a flight of two series of steps leading up to the doorway, over which will be a beautiful rose window, and again above this will be an arcade of niches for statues.

BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED INSIDE BUILDING

At present the building is only the basement of the future cathedral. Who would not be amazed when they realize that a few months ago the cathedral was a cold stark building, and now it is a thing of color with beautiful statues and stations and delicately colored side altars.

Hence forth great litergical functions will take place all the year round and will be carried out in great splendor. The liturical year is a lifelong tribute of sacrifice and song which the church never ceases to offer up night and day to her beloved. From all the centuries, she has gathered in her riches of poetry and wisdom; the wise and the learned she lays under contribution, the poets have sung her songs. The sayings of the saints and martyrs adorn her pages. There is advent for instance, a time of sadness, because it is a preparation for the great feast of Christmas.

To indicate this sadness the priests are clothed in purple and the church no longer intones the glorious hymn of the Te Deum in her night office.

Then there is Ash Wednesday, with the blessing of ashes, the outward sign of penance. On Passion Sunday the crucifixes, pictures and statues are all veiled in purple; first to commemorate how our Lord hid from the Jews who wished to stone Him, and secondly to denote the sad aspect of her altars how she mourns Him.

Then Palm Sunday with its blessing of palms and procession which follows it. Maunday Thursday the church commemorates the institution of the Holy Eucharist. This mass is one of the most solemn of the year, the sanctuary and altars are decorated with lights and flowers, and the priests wear white vestments.

Stripped of Ornaments

On Good Friday all the altars are stripped of all their ornaments, the statues unveiled, and the priests vest in black. On Holy Saturday, mass is proceeded by the solemn blessing of fire and incense, also the font, and the Paschel Candle.

On Easter Sunday the altars are ablaze with lights and profusely decorated with flowers and during the mass, the music is triumphal, accompanied by the pealing of bells at the Credo. How beautiful the Feast of Corpus Christi is with its magnificent procession of little girls in white, boys with sashes, cassocks and cottas, the priests clad in gorgeous vesments, the perfume of sweet smelling flowers and incense and the blaze of numbers of candles.

The place in the national life which the mediaeval cathedrals occupied was an important one. It was the seat or see of the bishop who from his throne guided the destinies of the people in affairs spiritual.

Why Cathedrals Erected

Cathedrals are erected and decorated partly as a means of popular education and they were the history books of the period, taking the place in the social state occupied to a large extent by such modern institutions as the public school, free library, museum and picture gallery of today. The sculpture and painting glass reflected the incidents of Ancient and New Testament history from the creation to the redemption of mankind, the sculptured forms and brilliant colorings being easily understood by the people. The virtues and vices with their symbals were displaced either in glass or statuary along with their rewards and punishments. The saints and angels told of the better life, and the various handicrafts, both of peace and war, were mirrored in the imperishable stone or glass.

Has Been Described

The interior of a Gothic Cathedral has been thus described:

"The tall shafts that mount in massy pride
Their mingling branches shoot from side to side.
Where elvin sculptors with fantastic clue
O'er the long roof their wild embroidery drew;
When superstition, with capricuous hand,
In a maze, the wreathed window planned,
With hues romantic tinged the gorgeous pane,
To fill with holy light the wondrous fane,
To aid the builder's model, richly rude,
By no Vitrusian symmetry subdued."

UNITED CHURCH CONFERENCE IS GREAT SUCCESS

Settlement Committee Notifies of Changes in Pastors

The second conference of the United Church in British Columbia closed a very successful session a few days ago, after the reading of the report of the settlement committee by Rev. J. R. Robertson. This report was of considerable interest as it was the first to be given under the new arrangements made by the United Church. Unlike the former stationing committee of the Methodist Church, it did not deal with every church in the bounds of the conference, but only such churches and ministers as made application for a change.

In Vancouver the principal changes noted were Rev. J. C. Switzer, from Tolmie street to North Vancouver; Rev. C. B. Freeman, from Cranbrook to Beaconfield; Rev. S. H. Smith, from Riverview to Collingwood; Rev. F. E. Runnells, from Grand Forks to Riverview; Rev. J. H. Wright from Nelson to River avenue.

Churches Allocated

The full list of changes reported to conference follows:

Cariboo Presbytery—McBride, A. B. Bentain; Giscombe, G. B. Switzer. Prince Rupert—Skidegate, S. S. Peat.

Lay Association Election

The annual young peoples' rally was held prior to the closing of conference and more than 8 young people from the various societies in Greater Vancouver responded to the roll call. The banner for best percentage of attendance was won by Fernie road, with 100 per cent; Chalmers came second with 94 per cent. A demonstration of a weekday programme was given by the Comet class of Chown Church, in which they gave an address on "Comparative Religions," in costume. Rev. A. K. McMinn gave a talk to the young people on the value of life and the road to success. Rev. W. E. Galloway, convener of the conference young people's committee, was in charge. Miss Dorothy Chalmers sang "My Task," and the young people's choir of St. Andrew's led the singing.

The officers of the lay association are: President, W. E. Harper, Victoria; vice-president, Judge J. D. Swanson, Kamloops; secretary, C. E. Mahon, Vancouver; treasurer, William McAdam, New Westminster.

FINE PROGRESS IS BEING MADE SAYS DR. SCOTT

Rev. W. G. Brown of Red Deer Mentioned as Moderator

"Everywhere from East and West comes a record of astonishing progress," writes Dr. Ephraim Scott, editor of the Presbyterian News-Bulletin, presented on Wednesday at meeting of the General Assembly of the Church in Montreal.

Money Comes

A new feature of the reorganized Presyterian church is a board of administration, composed entirely of laymen. They set out to secure funds, and from June 10 to January 31, 1926, the sum of $227,000 had been raised, so it is announced. The spendings out of this fund still leaves a bank balance on the right side of $83,000. The year under way calls for a budget of $600,000, $250,000 of which will be for home missions, $150,000 for foreign missions, $25,000 each for the two theological colleges, and $25,000 each for two beneficiary funds.

Fields Manned.

It is announced that 128 ministers and students have been placed in charge of mission fields. Dr. A. S. Grant announces "we have been able to man all fields and also to meet every demand for maintenance." The non-Anglo-Saxon is being included in the ministry of the church, Chinese in Victoria and Vancouver, Scandinavians, Persians, Hungarians and other nationals being sought out.

SONG SERVICE AT M'DOUGALL

Miss Edna Reed Will Sing —Choir Will Take Prominent Part

The Sunday evening service at McDougall Church will be one of special attractiveness. In addition to the choir music, Miss Edna Reed, one of Edmonton's favorite vocolists, will sing a number of Gospel Hymns, and will also take the Soprano Obligato in the anthem, "As Pants the Hart." As Miss Reed is about to leave the city this will be the last opportunity of hearing her for some time.

PASTOR GAVE FAREWELL TALK LAST SUNDAY

Rev. Frank E. Allen to Accept a University Position

Rev. Frank E. Allen, pastor of the Reformed Presbyterian church, Winnipeg, recently preached his farewell messages to his congregation. He has been pastor of the church here for seven years. He offered his resignation early in the year, but acceded to a petition from the congregation to remain. He has been offered a position on the speaker's bureau of the Bryan Memorial University association, which he has accepted. This association is raising five million dollars to build and endow a university in honor of the late William Jennings Bryan. Besides carrying on the work as pastor of his congregation Rev. Mr. Allen has been active in other departments of the life of Winnipeg. He has served as a member of the board of the Children's Aid society for six years and is at present a member of the executive of the General Ministerial association. He has taught Bible analysis for two years in the Winnipeg Bible Training school. In 1922 he published a book entitled "Practical Lectures on the Book of Job," and during the past year has written another book which has already appeared in serial form in two religious papers in the United States and is now running in "The Biblical Recorder," of New Zealand. The manuscript is now in the hands of the publishers and will soon be issued by them. It will be entitled "Evolution in the Balances." Mr. Allen will leave for the United States the first of next week, where he will take up his new work. His family will spend the summer at Winona lake, Indiana.

RECTOR DISCOVERS SECRET DOOR IN LONDON CHURCH IN SEARCHING SMALL TURRET

Panel Had Entry to Demolished Turret in "All Hallows by the Tours"—Edifice Popular With Americans Has Added Attraction

LONDON—A "secret door" dating back to the fourteenth century has just been discovered in a London church, which has considerable historic interest to Americans. The church is All-Hallows-by-the-Tower (formerly called "All-Hallows, Barking," but since it is nowheres near the Essex town of Barking, the latter designation has now been dropped.)

At All-Hallows-by-the-Tower (of London) William Penn was baptised in 1644, and there is a memorial to him on the south wall. There, also John Quincy Adams, sometimes president of the United States, was married in 1797, and the church registers contain the original signatures of the participants in this happy event. Needless to say, All-Hallows-by-the-Tower is a favorite shrine for American pilgrims.

The present pastor of the ancient church is no less a person than the famous war time minister of Ypres, the Rev. P. B. Clayton, founder of "Toc H" (the British Army signalling code for T. H.—the initials of "Talbot House," the famous rest house for "Tommies" on the Ypres salient founded by Clayton). "Toc H" is now a world-wide organization for the perpetuation of the memory of the men who fell at Ypres, and its headquarters are in the Rev Clayton's pastorate, All-Hallows-by-the-Tower.

The Rev. Mr. Clayton, who is an enthusiastic archaeologist, has been reading up the history of his church and he found references in the records to the existance of a small turret containing a stone staircase, which once led to the roof of the church. Since there was a turret and a staircase, Dr. Clayton divined without much difficulty that there must have been a door in the church. The turret had disappeared in the widening of Great Tower Street in the middle of the nineteenth century. But Dr. Clayton naturally supposed the door leading thereto still must exist.

Close examination of the structure led to the idea that the door, or site thereof, must be covered by pannelling, and some pannelling in the eastern aisles was tapped—with the result that a faint echo was obtained at one point. Workmen were called in to remove the pannelling and the searchers were rewarded. The heavy hinges of an ancient doorway were revealed. With the removal of a whole section of pannelling the entire door way was uncovered.

The door is studded with iron nails, the hinges are rusted, and some of the woodwork was rotted away. But is a splendid specimen of a fourteenth century doorway. The masonry is well preserved. The architecture is beautiful in its simple design.

All-Hallows-by-the-Tower has a history dating back to the earliest ages and was the resting place of many English martyrs. The first church was built on the same site 400 years before William the Conqueror landed in England. Charred woodwork forming the part of a later church destroyed by fire in 1087 was found beneath the paving in 1922. The arches in the nave date from about 1210, and the rest of the present building has been contributed by builders and repairers during the succeeding ages. The church largely escaped the ravages of the Great Fire of London, and no city church has such beautiful ancient ironwork and masonry.

It is proposed to leave the newly discovered doorway uncovered for any one to see, and it undoubtedly will be a source of great interest to American tourist this year.

A DESSERT THAT MAKES ITSELF

One of the most delicious desserts one can serve, and it is one especially loved by children, can be said practically to make itself. It is called Caramel Pudding. Here it is:

"Place an unopened can of Borden's Eagle Brand Condensed Milk in a kettle of boiling water and simmer for two and a half hours, being careful not to let the kettle boil dry. Remove can, cool and chill. Remove top of can, cutting along the side of can—not the top—so that the contents may be removed whole; place on a serving dish and garnish with broken nut meats and whipped cream. To serve individually, cut in slices, garnish with nut meats and whipped cream—or use plain unsweetened cream, with or without garnish."

For five generations a family at Stratton, near Norwich, England, has been keeping natural history records, such as the leafing of trees and the arrivals and departures of the birds. The history goes back to 1740.

DAINTY JUNE BRIDE

Picturesque Setting at Morning Nuptials in Mission Chapel

Bride Wears Lace Wedding Robe Which is Family Heirloom

THE Mission Chapel, beautifully decorated with lilies and white iris was the scene of a picturesque and socially interesting wedding on Saturday morning 10.30 o'clock when the Bishop H. A. Gray, solemnized the marriage of Gertrude Jean Crawford (Mimosa) only daughter of Major and Mrs. Pentland William Lindsay and the late Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bishopric of Edmonton.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely gown of old Limerick lace which had been used by the bride's relatives for seven generations. The bodice was simple with long close fitting sleeves and the bouffant skirt had festoons of moire ribbon. With it was worn an early Victorian picture hat of ivory lace and orange blossoms with a band of tulle under the chin and fastened at the left side and falling over the left shoulder into a long train touched with clusters of orange blossom.

The bridal bouquet was of white provence roses and lilies of the valley festooned in old lace. The bride was unattended.

Mr. Godfrey Morris acted as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of the brides parents of the R. C. M. P. Barracks where the rooms were fragrant with roses and white lilac blossoms. Mrs. Lindsay received with Mr. and Mrs. Bishopric wearing a smart costume of Roise de rose and black maline picture hat with brilliant buckle and carried a sheaf of crimson roses.

Miss Gertrude Lampson-Wurtel of Montreal a great aunt of the bride wore a charming toilette of taupe moracain with touches of powder blue and hat to match. She carried a hand boquet of forget-me-nots and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. J. O. Wilson of Victoria was dressed in beige French crepe with picture hat and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Bishropic left on a motor trip for the coast where they will spend the next few weeks. Mrs. Bishropic wore for travelling a modish frock of mignonette green silk charmeen with a cloak of the same material lined with beige silk crepe. Her hat was of beige crepe embroidered in tracery design in green ribbon straw.

On their return they will reside at 11121-93 avenue.

Exhibition Offers Women's Department More Prize Awards

Keen Interest Being Shown in Exhibits for This Section

A comparison of this year's Edmonton Exhibition prize list with that of last year reveals the increasing desire of the management to stimulate still further interest in the women's departments. The prize money has been increased by fifty per cent over that of last year, and consequently the exhibits, which are always of an interesting character, will no doubt show a proportionate interest both in number and quality.

Another half page is required in the prize list this year to take care of the new classes in women's work. There are four cash prizes in each of the main classes this year, instead of three last year. One new class is known as the "atrocity special," for the worst specimen of a useless or ugly article, ancient or modern, intended by the maker to be artistic or decorative. This includes anything in the line of handicraft, sewing, art or decoration, etc.

The exhibition is from July 12 to 17, inclusive, and all entries close on June 30.

Gracious Hostess to Local Club in Sun-filled Palm Room

All through these changeable spring days the Palm Room of the Macdonald Hotel has been the setting for many a gay affair, both at the luncheon and tea hour, but not one of these warmer weather events has portrayed a more joyously informal air than did the tea given on Friday afternoon by Mrs. Charles Stewart of Ottawa, wife of the Minister of the Interior, when she entertained the members of the Women's Liberal club of this city.

Gracious Hostess

Mrs. Stewart received the guests at the entrance to the Palm Room, which was suddenly bathed in warm sunshine at the tea hour after an unexpectedly heavy shower, graciously clad in a gown of foxglove shaded crepe and a black picture hat. Standing with her to introduce the club members was Mrs. Roy Stovel Cook, president of the club, frocked in navy blue crepe with a dooping, feathered black hat.

The long tea table was set across the southern windows looking out towards the calm Saskatchewan and here pouring tea for the many guests were Madame P. E. Lessard and Mrs. J. C. Bowen. Effective, casually-set clusters of snapdragon in the fuschia colors shading from purple-mauve and rose-cerise to pale blush pink added a piquant touch to an attractive tea table.

Guests Present

Some of those present were Mrs. J. W. Heffernan, Mrs. Alex. Bonneau, Mrs. A. H. Edwards, Mrs. F. H. Lee, Mrs. J. B. Yule, Mrs. Frank MacMillan, Mrs. Mattern, Mrs. A. C. Burpee, Mrs. Rault, Mrs. M. A. STRATFORD WOMAN

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Stratford, Ontario. — "After my first baby was born I started to work on the tenth day and did a big washing on the twelfth day. Being so young (I was married at 19) I did not know what was the matter, so let it go until I was all run-down, weak and nervous, and had a bad displacement. For nearly two years I could not sleep and I would always complain of having 'not a head-ache, but a brain-ache.' My mother is taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during the Change of Life and she recommended it to me. After taking two bottles I began to get a little sleep and to feel better and I have never left off since then, except for about three months. I can safely say I have taken thirty bottles since my second baby was born. I think it makes child-birth easier as I had terrible pains with my first three children and very few with my fourth as I was so much stronger. I am now able to do my work alone, but I am still taking the Vegetable Compound as I am nursing baby."—Mrs. OMER PAUL, 49 Cherry Street, Stratford, Ontario.

If you are suffering from any weakness which causes such symptoms as pains in the side and back and nervous feelings, give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial now.

DOROTHY DIX

A Contrite Husband Who Warns All Men Against Swapping Old Wives for New—Shall She Take a Dare and Go to a Party in Boy's Clothes?—The Henpecked Husband Who Can't Call on His Mother

Dear Miss Dix—Five years ago I married the dearest and best girl in the world. She was all that a wife should be, affectionate to me, a tidy little housekeeper, who had a good supper smoking on the table for me when I went home at night and my slippers toasting by the fire. Well, a strange woman came to our town who said she fell in love with me at sight, and who began running after me and writing love letters to me. I was foolish enough to think that I was in love with her, and made my good wife divorce me, and I married her. Then my troubles began. This woman I am married to is lazy and shiftless. We live in a pigsty. I have nothing to eat. My clothes are never mended or washed, and she is a virago in temper. And, worst of all, I know now that I never loved anyone but my first wife an dthis other was only a passing infatuation. I wish I could warn all men against giving up a good wife for the "other woman."

A SORRY HUSBAND.

Answer:

Sometimes the punishment does fit the crime, and no sinner ever gets just exactly what he deserves quite so often as does the man who, without cause, forsakes a good and faithful wife for some woman who has fired his fancy for the moment, or appealed to his baser passions.

All of us know dozens of cases where a wife with whom her husband could find no fault, a wife who had been tender and devoted to him, who had borne him children, who had made a comfortable home for him, who had worked hard and scrimped and saved to help him build up a fortune, was forced by him to give him a divorce in order that he might marry some younger woman or some woman who had flattered him into believing that she was in love with him and made him believe he was in love with her. But not once in a dozen times have we seen these second marriages turn out anything but disastrously for the man.

We have seen how often these men break suddenly in health because the new wives will not bother to take care of them and feed them and make them comfortable as their old wives did. We have seen how often these second marriages mark the end of a man's success in business and the beginning of his financial downfall, because his conduct has shaken the confidence of business men in his integrity and his judgment, and because the new wife is extravagant, while the old wife was a saver.

We have seen the forlorn spectacle of such men dragged around by their young wives to cabarets and night clubs—the sugar papas—who held down the tables and paid the bills, while their wives danced and flirted with boys of their own age.

And we have known that among the men who trade off old wives for new there are very, very few who have not regretted their bargains and who would not have given a great deal to be back at their old fireside with their old wives who had proved their faith and love for them.

It is a pity that the men who let some flapper persuade them that their wives are too old for them, or have got too fat, and the idiots who let some vamp get in her deadly work upon them don't take a look around at some of their fellow men who have forsaken their good wives for these adventuresses and see how few of these second marriages have turned out well. It would stop many a one from taking a step that he spends the balance of his life regretting.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Dorothy Dix—I have always wanted to wear men's clothes, and a friend has dared to me to dress as a boy and go as her escort to a dance to which we are asked. I would do it, but at this party there are to be several new men upon whom I should like to make a favorable impression, and some one has suggested that it would be impossible to do so if I were dressed as a boy. Please give me your candid opinion on this.

RENEE.

Answer:

Well, my candid opinion, Renee, is that for you to go to the party dressed as a boy would be an insult to your hostess and would disgust the men.

I will agree with you that it is a misfortune to be born of the persuasion and have to wear feminine apparel. Undoubtedly, a man's clothes are more practical, more durable, more comfortable and convenient than a woman's. It must be perfectly heavenly to have pockets all over you into which you can put things, and to be able to get by with two or three suits a season.

But Nature having wished your sex upon us, there is nothing you can do to change it, and you have to abide by its limitations and make the best of them.

And no woman helps her case by trying to make an imitation man of herself. On the contrary, she makes a bad matter worse, for convention demands that a woman shall be good-looking, and whatever drawbacks she may have, feminine clothes are a first aid to beauty. The homeliest girl alive is attractive swathed in chiffons. The prettiest one is homely in breeches.

I know that there is a perfect mania among girls now for wearing knickers. They are strutting around all over the place in them and marring the landscape with their ugliness. And when I behold them with their big hips and little ankles, looking like tops, I understand why there is such a decline in matrimony.

For femininity is woman's greatest charm to man. So when you want to make a hit, stick to your skirts, and don't try to understudy your little brother.

DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I am a young married man and have a good position, and own my own home, but this is my trouble:

I have a widowed mother who worked for me since I was a baby. I was her only support up to the time of my marriage. Now when I have a chance to repay my mother by giving her a home, my wife absolutely refuses to have her in the house. Her mother lives with us, and I support her, although she has grown sons of her own. My wife watches me so closely that I cannot give my mother a dollar. She even accuses me of meeting mother outside, when the truth of it is that I rarely see her to keep peace. What would you do?

FRED.

Answer:

Why, I'd spunk up, Fred, and try to be a man instead of a mouse. I wouldn't let any woman alive henpeck me as you are letting your wife henpeck you.

Why, she can't have a particle of respect for you when she sees you lie down and let her walk all over you. Buck up, man, and have one grand fight, and put her where she belongs, if you expect to keep her love.

I don't advise you to bring your mother into your own house to live. That is out of the question with the sort of virago and bully you have got for a wife. But I do say, if you have one particle of manhood left in you, that you must tell your wife right flat out that you are going to give your mother a definite allowance to live on, and that you don't want to hear one word from her about it. And if she says that you can't afford it, tell her that you would have more money if her mother divided her time between her children, and that you are going to go fifty-fifty on the mother proposition.

The Marriage Meddler

By HAZEL DEYO BATCHELOR

Jean Ainsley and Conrad Morgan elope. They are so much in love that they do not stop to consider the consequences, and it isn't until later that Jean discovers her mother-in-law must live with them. Mrs. Morgan has taken a dislike to Jean and is constantly extolling her own daughter, Florence. She has no idea that Florence is bored with her husband and fancies herself in love with Merton Throne, a college senior. Jean has known Morton before her marriage, and Mrs. Morgan succeeds in planting the seed of jealousy in conrad's mind. Merton and Andy Paterson take Florence and Cynthia Eldredge to a place called the Red Lion Tavern. On the same night Jean goes to Boston to see an old school home. The police break into friend and is therefore not to the roadhouse and the boys succeed in getting the girls out of a window, but Florence's maid, Kitty, is there and later tells Richard, Florence's husband. Florence denies having been there and manages so that the blame falls on Jean. Richard calls Con on the telephone and, egged on by his mother and his own jealousy, Con believes that Jean has deceived him. The next morning when she returns from Boston he accuses her without giving her a chance to explain. She leaves the house without vindicating herself.

CHAPTER XLVII

Distraught

Hardly aware of what she was doing and carrying her small overnight bag, Jean walked down the sunny street. She had left the house with no clear idea of where she wanted to go, but as she turned into the main street she came to the old Hamilton House, the one hotel the town possessed, and moved by some impulse she went up the old fashioned steps and into the lobby.

Her one idea was to be alone to thing over this ghastly thing that had happened. What terrible thing had been in Con's mind when he had accused her of being with Merton? And to flail her as he had without giving her a chance to explain, to treat her without respect, even to subject her to physical violence in his fury, it was all like a dreadful nightmare and yet it was true.

The lobby was practically deserted and she sat down in a chair to try to decide what to do. Her anguish of mind was so great that she was hardly aware of the fact that a man and woman had come downstairs and were pausing a moment by the desk. They came on across the lobby and were passing Jean, sunk deep in the big chair, when suddenly the woman spoke.

"Do you think it was wise to surprise her like this? After all, she couldn't have received your letter until yesterday; she won't be expecting us so soon."

Jean started up, hesitated a moment and and then sprang to her feet. "Mother—dad—" the words were fairly torn out of her. Then she was in her mother's arms, her face buried against the sweet throat smelling faintly of violets, and she was sobbing as if her heart would break.

Over her head the eyes of the man and woman met significantly. And then without a word they led her between them up the stairs and into a big sunny room with old-fashioned lace curtains at the windows. Without a word, Mr. Ainsley sat down in a big chair and as if she had been a child, gathered his daughter into his arms. For a time Jean sobbed uncontrollably, and when at last she could sit up and smile faintly, she said with an attempt at humor.

"This is a nice welcome for you, isn't it?"

Mr. Ainsley grinned, but Mrs. Ainsley's face was grave. It wasn't like Jean to give way to emotion like this. She had always despised hysterical girls who cried for no reason at all and it must have been something serious to have caused such an outburst.

"What has happened, dear?" she asked after a minute. "Do you think you can talk about it now? Your father and I thought we'd give you a surprise visit, but we hadn't thought to come so soon. As things have turned out, it's a good thing we did."

Jean was calmer now and was able to give a fairly lucid description of what had happened, that is up to the time of her arrival in Hamilton that morning. From then on she was fairly vague, and at last she burst out wildly:

"I don't know what I'm supposed to have done, and after all, it doesn't matter. What really matters is that Con and I have been slowly forced apart. I never meant to mention this I hate complaining, but Con's mother hates me. She has been prejudiced against me from the beginning and no matter how hard I tried, she would never give me a chance. Con loves me, I'm sure of it, but his mother influences him and he can't seem to help it. Things get to a point where he sees things through her eyes. If only we could have been alone everything would have been all right."

"You have always been so evasive in your letters," Mrs. Ainslay said, quickly, "we had no idea that you were unhappy."

"I never thought it would work out anyway," put in Jean's father, "but I have faith in Conrad, and in you too, Jean. Besides I have a little scheme that may prove interesting. I think it's about time the other in-laws were given a chance to show what they can do."

"Enchanted Hill" at Dreamland Monday

The fastest motion picture Jack Holt has appeared in to date is "The Enchanted Hill." He says so himself.

In the evolution of this Peter B. Kyne story, the popular Paramount player is compelled to make several trips through the air in a speedy plane, hit up the desert roads in a high-powered car, at not less than eighty miles an hour, and do some of the most hazardous riding of his career on the back of his famous saddle horse, "Red Chief."

The scene of the action is laid in New Mexico where Holt is the owner of a large cattle ranch, which a gang of desperados are trying to take away from him. The modernness of the tale is exemplified by the logical use of airplanes and machine guns.

The picture will show at the Dreamland theatre Monday.

TO MAKE FACE LOOK SLIMMER.

BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Split Ends of Hair

Rett writes—"I had the ends of my hair cut and they are split again in two weeks. What can I do to make my hair grow? It grows in the back, but not so much on the sides. How does one use the henna leaves to bring out the auburn tints in one's hair? I am 18 years old, five feet one inch tall; what should I weigh? My cheeks are very full; how can I get rid of wrinkles under my eyes and make my lashes grow thick and long? Answer—Healthy hair does not need to be clipped more than a few times a year in order to remove the split ends. Your hair must be in poor condition. It is probably too dry. You should massage your scalp for ten or fifteen minutes a day and apply a good hair tonic three times a week. Send a stamped, self addressed envelope for my leaflet on "Care of the Hair." To make the henna rinse brew one ounce of dried henna (obtainable at a drug or herb store) in one pint of boiling water. When cool, strain and use as a final rinse after your shampoo. Dilute the rinse with plain water to obtain lighter shades. This is, of course, not a permanent dye. Your correct weight is 111 pounds. I do not think that you can make your cheeks any slimmer unless you lose weight all over. Wear your hair forward on the sides and that will make your face look more slender. Your eye wrinkles are probably due to eye strain; consult an oculist about them. Brush lashes with white vaseline twice a day to encourage their growth.

Buttermilk for the Face

L. B. writes—"Will the use of buttermilk on the face make the hair grow there? If not, how may it be used?" Answer—No, indeed. Buttermilk is a good bleach and softener for the complexion. You may use it to bathe your face in after you have cleansed the skin at bedtime. Mixed into a paste with oatmeal, almond meal or cornmeal, it makes a splendid bleaching pack. Leave it on an hour or more before washing off in tepid water.

Water-Waving

Peggie writes—"Why doesn't my hair curl with water wavers? I put them in while my hair is still wet, but it only leaves a suspicion of a curl. As my hair is a little curly naturally. I don't see why it won't curl this way. I am five feet seven inches tall and weigh 148 pounds, how can I reduce?" Answer—There is a knack about putting in water-waving combs and possibly you have not learned it. The waves will be more distinct if you use two combs facing each other to each wave: the teeth of the combs at the ends should dove-tail into each other. I advise you to have your hair water-waved by an expert once so that you may see just how to do it. Put a little curling fluid on your hair before adjusting the combs. Send a stamped self-addressed envelope for my leaflet on "How to Lose Weight." If you are 20 years old you should weigh about 133 pounds.

Paris Mystery Play Showing at Rialto

"The Phantom of the Opera," Lon Chaney's much-heralded successor spectacle to "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and one of the most daring departures in screen portrayals ever attempted is showing Monday till Wednesday at the Rialto theatre. It is a spectacular mystery story of Paris, in which a complete operatic performance, staged in a huge replica of the Paris Opera House, largest in the world, is compared with wierd and grotesque adventures in the great cellars and catacombs.

Lon Chaney plays "The Phantom," a strange creature of the shadows," in a makeup that eclipses his weird disguise as "Quasimodo" in the Hugo classic. Mary Philbin, plays the opera singer whom he kidnaps into his underground stronghold and Norman Kerry plays her lover and rescuer.

A remarkable cast is seen in the principal roles, and fully four thousand people take part in the mob scenes, the brilliant spectacles on the Grand staircase of the Opera and the gala performance of "Faust" staged in the opera house proper.

Bevy of Beauties in "The Devil's Circus"

When you say "the most beautiful girls in Hollywood" you mean beautiful and "nothing else but" because Hollywood, among other things, is recognized all over the world as the abode of the fairest of the fair.

Nearly one hundred girls who were selected on this description from the personnel of the spectacular beauty ballet in the circus sequence of "The Devil's Circus," Benjamin Christianson's first American production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer coming to the Gem theatre Monday.

The harem scene in the circus sequence in which these shapely beauties parade their charms before the sultan, is one of the most beautiful ever conceived for a motion picture.

The jewels in the picture's crown of beauty are Norma Shearer and Carmel Myers. The cast of the picture includes Charles Emmett Mack, John Miljan, Joyce Coad and the dog buddy.

PARIS, June 5—Just about this time of the year Paris almost always has a summer madness. I've noticed it before. For us it is usually an autumn joy, so why worry.

One summer madness I remember when the mercury was almost oozing well was heavy black velvet hats out of the top of the thermometers. Black velvet had evidently got 'em again, but not alone. It is accompanied by a still more formidable heat-wave enemy—caracule kid!

Star at Princess Once a Lawyer

Phillips Smalley, famous both as actor and director, and who plays the father in Mary Philbin's new Universal starring vehicle "Stella Maris," now at the Princess theatre, started life as an attorney. On graduating from Balliol college, Oxford, he practiced law for eight years, when Mrs. Fiske persuaded him to go on the stage in one of her plays. After a notable stage career he entered screen activities as director, then returned to acting. "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "Trimmed in Scarlet" and other notable pictures added to his fame.

"Stella Maris," is a new screen adaption of the famous novel by William J. Locke, in which Miss Philbin is seen in a dual role. Elliot Dexter plays the leading male part and Gladys Brockwell portrays the shrewish, cruel, nemesis of the heroine in a manner that has awakened much admiring comment for its realism while Jason Robards impersonates the character of Walter Herold.

Peppy Bill Promised at Pantages Theatre

There's generous entertainment in the musical comedy tabloid fantasy, "Follies De Sylvia," which Jack De Sylvia presents as the headliner on the peppy program which will be presented at the Pantages next week, starting Thursday with a matinee. This is one of the most elaborate offerings of its type seen here recently and its eight scenes are brimming with bright dance and song features staged with some novel and striking scenic effects. Jack De Sylvia himself leads. An Apache dance and a submarine episode are enjoyable.

Norvin Mack and his versatile partner, Walter Stanton, present their latest comedy offering, "Home Sweet Home," as an added feature. These clever comedians have a manner all their own of enticing the laughs. A few popular songs and a special background combine to make the offering the perfect humorous skit. Another attraction is provided by Heras and Wallace, known as the "Back Yard Entertainers." They offer a diversity of vaudeville novelties ranging from instrumental number on the mandolin and guitar to a marvelous routine of acrobatic tumbling, with a finale that defies every law of gravity.

Mary Pickford Curls Unwashed for Weeks

Would you believe that Mary Pickford could bear to let her world-known and world-loved curls go unwashed for six whole weeks?

Well, she did. But it was for the sake of art. Specifically, a famous character by the name of Tess is to blame for it all. Miss Pickford has brought this heroine of the memorable story, "Tess of the Storm Country" back to te screen in a new and her own production, and issmuch as this said heroine is a resident of an obscure fisherman's village where scrupulous cleanliness is not one of the watchwords, it could not be expected, that she should be a devotee to the popular habit of milady of refinement to shampoo her hair several times a week.

In fact, Tess is so unsophisticated she does not know anything about the importance of keeping her beautiful hair free from grime of her abiding place until one of the matronly neighbors apprises her of her discovery that she could be a mighty good-looking girl if she would only "spruce up" a bit. Hence it has come to pass that after interpreting this role for six weeks, Miss Pickford reached the point where first shampoo was logical. This new "Tess of the Storm Country," a United Artists release, is coming to the Monarch theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

"That's My Baby" Proves Screen Scream

Hey! Hey! Here's a funney load of hay! "As funny as a load of hay," yes! This is the latest phrase to be added to Canadian vocabularies and it owes its place in current conversation with Douglas MacLean's development of the funny possibilities of a load of hay in "That's My Baby," his latest Paramount comedy now playing at the Capitol theatre where it will continue Monday and Tuesday.

The comedian, carrying the baby referred to in the title, does a parachute jump that ends in a load of hay. The wind tugs on the parachute and the load of hay goes into action with hilarious results. In addition to the load of hay and the baby, a noteable supporting cast contributes to the fun-making in "That's My Baby."

THE BEST INVESTMENT YOU CAN MAKE

What is the Best Investment You Can Make?

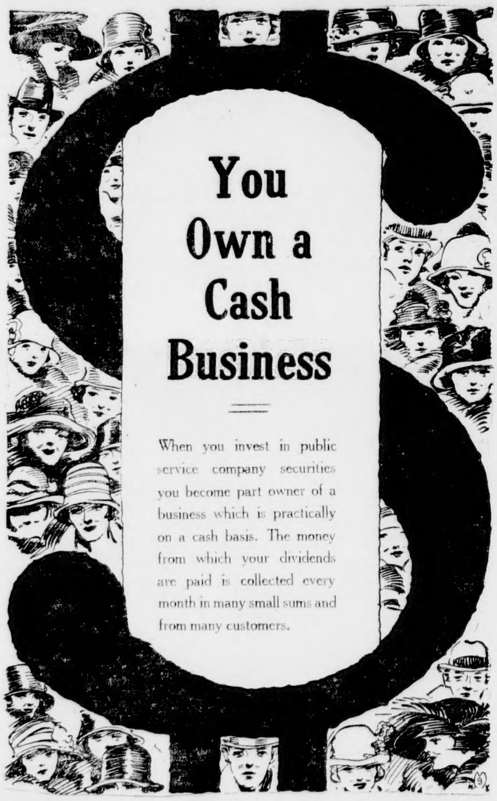
In the first place, if you were asked to choose the kind of business you would like best to own, you would probably say: "I should like to own a business in which I'd always have plenty of good, steady customers who would always buy at a fair price everything I turned out."

Does such a business exist? It does. It is the public service business, into which hundreds of thousands of people have put and are putting their money.

When you own part of a public service company you supply products that people, factories and whole cities would not willingly do without--public service companies keep right on producing and selling day in and day out, good times or bad--people must have food and warmth. These earnings are steady because our board of public service commissioners regulates the security issues and rates of the public service company, so that it gets a fair price for the commodity it sells—fair to both, to the company and its customers.

Sixteeen Billion Dollars

The Dollars which you put into public service securities become part of the enormous sum of more than sixteen billion dollars which is invested in the public service industry--over four times as much as in the steel business; over eight times as much as in the automobile business and over ten times as much as in the meat packing business.



You Own a Cash Business

When you invest in public service company securities you become part owner of a business which is practically on a cash basis. The money from which your dividends are paid is collected every month in many small sums and from many customers.

75 Thousand Dollars

More than 250 people have purchased over $75,000, par value, of our Prior Preference Stock, in the first two days of our ten-day employee-Customer Ownership Campaign. Only 250 shares are now available at the very favorable price of $92 per share to yield 6½% with safety. YOUTHFUL COLLEGE BOY PLAYS HIS WAY THROUGH SCHOOL WITH HIS VIOLIN

Dick Benson Was First Impressed by Instrument at Six Years of Age—Moral: "If Your Child Has Talent, Give Him a Chance Now"

When Dick Benson was not quite six he heard a violin for the first time; he stood entranced and called insistently for more. People laughed at the child's eagerness, and the young man who was playing said to the mother, "Mrs. Benson, he should have a violin now; if I had had one when I was a little fellow it would have helped a lot."

And because mothers remember it came about that in the spring there was a half-size violin for Dick. The neighbors laughed a little. "There is no one to teach him, anyway," they said.

Dick's History

Here is the mother's story: "Dick played simple airs by ear, and I taught him the notes on both piano and violin. When our pastor fell ill, Mr. Dean came to supply his pulpit for three months. He knew something of the violin, and he had the little boy come for an hour every day for his study. I think Dick learned to use the bow correctly from him; he played more sweetly, we knew. Then Miss Lucy helped Dick some. She had studied only on the third position, and though she refused to call herself a teacher, she worked with him a bit, until Mrs. Merriman came to our village. Mrs. Merriman taught violin, piano and voice and 'Expression.' A big undertaking, wasn't it? Dick hated her cordially, but we think he learned a little in the few weeks I felt able to pay the high price for lessons. There were long months between these teachers when Dick played on alone. He was a big boy now, and we put the little violin away; his larger one was not so good, for many things had not gone so well; we hardly felt we could afford it at all.

Practiced Faithfully

"When Dick was eleven, Mr. Lyon came. 'Practice scales and open strings, listen to your tones and play music,' he said.

"Mr. Lyon was our high school principal for two years, and he and the boy worked out a plan that made it possible for the boy to have the very excellent violin that he now plays.

"It all seems so long ago. After Dick's father died, I wondered how the boy was to go through college. I knew that he must—but how? He was not very large for all his sixteen years and it was now his last year in high school. I wrote the registrar early in the spring before my boy's high school graduation. 'Was there a place for a boy to make his way?'

"There are five applications for every position open, for yard work or waiting on the table, he wrote me. 'If your son could use a typewriter, he could make, say, twenty or twenty-five dolars a week, doing typing, but that makes an excess of time for his work. We have calls for linotype operators and a violin player, but so young a boy from a small town could hardly fill these places.'

"A motion picture theatre pays Dick thirty dollars a week and at Saturday matinee. A church downtown pays him fifty dollars a month to play at their evening service. He plays at the morning service at the University church of our denomination for nothing at all. 'I could hardly get accutomed to being paid to play at church,' he wrote me. You see that we have always lived in a very small town indeed.

Three Courses

"Dick carries only three courses. He had time for work in athletics, though and putting money aside, and we do not regret that he will be a year longer than the average student in completing the work for his degree.

"What if I had not bought the little violin! He would have played I suppose, but the peculiar brilliancy of his music, the thing that is enabling him to have wonderful years of college life while doing the work he loves, would never have been attained"

If your child has a talent, give him a chance now. That is the moral of this story

The Princess' Plan

When she awoke the next morning, the Princess of Persia found her quite disturbed by a racket in the courtyard. Through her open window came the boom of gongs, the scream of trumpets, and the squeakings of the wry-necked fife.

"Today I must wed the Sultan of Cashmere," she lamented, "and my heart is given to Prince Feroze-Shah.

Then, amid her tears she took new courage. She decided upon a clever stroke by which she might outwit her bold suitor. She stopped her tears and burst into peals of laughter, so weird and shrill that her handmaidens came running. They tried to quiet her, but the more they did so, the louder became her outcries. A messenger hastened to the sultan.

"The princess has gone mad he announced.

Fearing the worst, the sultan rushed to the apartments of the women. At sight of him, the princess renewed her lamentations and so great became her frenzy that he was forced to withdraw and call the court physicians.

"We can do nothing for her," said the doctors; and the sultan ordering that none disturb her, issued a proclamation, asking the services of the wisest practitioners of his kingdom.

No help comes for the princess on Monday's story.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC TO BE TORN DOWN

Famous New York Structure to Be Replaced by Large Block

New York's Academy of music is to be no more. Soon that famous structure where Adelina Patti made her American duet in 1858, will be torn down. On the site a twenty four storey office building is to shoot skywards.

Thus must we see fourteenth street pass; the cross town artery where the Steiways held forth for so long; the meeting place—in Luchow's—of music and drama reporters of the daily press to exchange the accumulated news material gathered in their nightly rounds.

It was in the old academy of music that King Edward VII, then the Prince of Wales, stopped for a brief time during his visit to this country in 1860. There were heard illustrious songsters of both sexes, and it was the haven of the 400 named by Ward McAllister as constituting the hub of Gotham's social wheel.

At a later time there will be news of a similar character to follow, when the present Metropolitan Opera House must make way for structural progress.

MUSIC EXAMS START JUNE 14

Norman Wilks, of Royal College, Will Conduct Board's Tests

Practical examinations of the Associated Board of the Royal Academy of Music and the Royal College of Music will be held in Edmonton during the week commencing June 14. The examinations held June 14 and 15 will take place at Alberta College North and those during the remainder of the week will be held at the studios of the teachers concerned.

The examiner, Norman Wilks of the Royal College of Music will arrive in the city Sunday, June 13.

Norman Wilks was born at Birchington, Kent. As a boy he won a scholarship in singing for the Duke of Newcastle's private choir, and later, though entering on a business career, he continued his musical studies under Dr. Ebenezer Prout, Joseph Holebrooke and Michael Hambourg.

Adopts Music as Career

Finally he decided to take up music as a profession and studied at the Brussels Conservatoire, and in Berlin under Frederic Lamond and Arthur Schabel. He is now on the teaching staff at the Royal college of music.

Mr. Wilks has given many recitals in England, Holland, Belgium and Germany, and has appeared at the Philharmonic concerts, with the Queen's Hall orchestra, London, and in the United States in 1912-13 with the Boston Symphony orchestra.

During the war, Mr. Wilks served with the Buffs Regiment and was awarded the Military Cross.

AID TO IMMIGRANTS

In the eleven months ended February 28 last, the Federal Government contributed $247,530 in assisting ocean and railway passage for immigrants. Of this $130,703 are recoverable loans. Assistance for land settlement of immigrants cost another $284,725 in that period.

"WHAT A SING-SONG WILL DO"

By Mrs. Charlotte Ward, Perryvale

Try singing a song when the outlook's dark.
If your feelings are ruffled, too.
'Twill make the heart light, the day will be bright,
And the sun will shine upon you.

Chorus:

Oh a rollicking song and a rollicking tune
Will drive all the blues away;
'Twill make you feel cheery and days won't be dreary,
If a sing-song is part of your day.
For laughter and mirth will have a new birth,
When music in hearts holds the sway.

Yes, music hath charms and 'tis also true
That melody gladdens the heart.
As birds in their flight, soaring up to great height,
Will inspire you in song to take part.

Oh, a rollicking song, etc.

DOUGLAS MacLEAN, MARGARET MORRIS AND CLAUDE GILLINGWATER IN A SCENE FROM "THAT'S MY BABY" A PARAMOUNT PICTURE

SONG

By E. N. daC. Andrade

Go, teach the swan to swim,
The swallow still to skim,
The bat to go by night,
The lark to love the light,
The tortoise to step short,
the gnat to move,
And counsel me to love.

Were I, like every creature,
But true to my own nature:
But let my lips impart
What lieth near my heart
Then would I tell and tell in every place
Her goodness and her grace.

What's beautiful and fit?
A rainbow bravely lit,
The gliding sun at morn,
A hillside ripe with corn,
Apple in bloom, a full-rigged shipped at sea,
And my love kind to me,
Soon it may be,

DISCOVERY OF SOME SKETCHES ARE MADE

Discovery of some sketches for an unfinished opera by Tchaikovsky, "The Veyovod," has been made among the papers of the composer's servant, Alexandre Sotronef, who died recently at Klin. The London Monthly Musical Record states that the rough draft of the opera may be suffilent for the reconstruction of the work, the final draft of which was destroyed by the composer. Sotronef's son turned it over, along with other manuscripts of the composer, to the Tchaikovsky museum at Klin.

The Only Medicine Baby Has Had

Is What Thousands of Mothers Say of Baby's Own Tablets

Once a mother has used Baby's Own Tablets for her little ones she will use nothing else. Experience teaches her that they are without an equal for relieving baby of any of the many minor ailments which afflict him at one time or another. The Tablets never fail to be of benefit—they cannot possibly do harm as they are guaranteed to be free from all injurious drugs.

Concerning Baby's Own Tablets Mrs. Russell Hill, Norwood, Ont., says:—"I shall always have a good word to say for Baby's Own Tablets. I have given them to our baby girl. In fact they are the only medicine she has ever had and I am proud to say that she took second prize at our baby show. She is eleven months old and weighs 22 pounds. No mother whose child is peevish or ailing will make a mistake in giving it Baby's Own Tablets."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by medcine dealers or direct by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

ITALIANS HONOR GIUSEPPA VERDI

Special memorial observances are taking place in Italy in honor of the great Giuseppe Verdi, composer, who died 25 years ago, January 27, last. In September, Arturo Toscanini and a company of distinguished artists will go to the little north Italian town where he spent most of his life, Busseto, and give a few performances in the Teatro Verdi. This was also done in 1913 in observance of the one hundredth anniversary of his birth, when the late Cleofonte Campanini, then director of the Chicago Opera association, conducted a special season of Verdi operas in the neighboring city of Parma.

SONG

When I am dead, my dearest,
Sing no sad songs for me;
Plant thou no roses at my head,
Nor shady cypress tree;
Be the green grass above me
With sadows and dewdrops wet;
And if thou wilt, remember,
And if thou wilt, forget.

I shall not see the shadows,
I shall not feel the rain;
I shall not hear the nightingale
Sing on as if in pain;
And dreaming through the twilight
That does not rise nor set,
Haply I may remember,
And haply may forget.

MUSIC FOR MOTION PICTURE FILMS IS MORE IMPORTANT AT HOLLYWOOD THESE DAYS

The importance of fitting music to motion picture films, with the noticeable increase in artistic values of Hollywood's great industry, has been brought to the attention of producers with more pronounced results and movie magnates have been engaging better talent during the past two years to supply the musical scores for their yards of celluloid story-telling.

Observers, casual, caustic and celebrated, have announced their discovery of the fact in periodicals during the past few months and at the recent National Music Supervisor's convention here, it was pointed out that its effect upon the musical education of the bourgeoisie was something to be gratified about.

That celebration is unnecessary for appreciation of the "movies" must lessen the worries of the magnate, who, we imagine, gives thanks at his matutinal prayers, before retiring, because the monotonous voice of Louise Lushishness (ingenue in "Just Before the Battle") is seen rather than heard while the orchestra, organ or oboe obligato emits the soulful strains of "Down by the Old Mill Stream," "Down By De Winegar Woiks," or something similarly appropriate.

Statisticians have hinted that approximately 20,000,000 people attend the 20,000 motion picture houses each day—or one-sixth of the national population. Now, when one considers these astounding, if dry, figures from a musical viewpoint, particularly as regards the musical education of the appreciative though uninformed public, he must realise the tremendous factor the tonal accompaniment to the film has become.

Themotic sheets now accompany the outstanding motion picture productions and even the smallest theater is furnished with copies of the suggested musical accompaniment to the picture. In the old days, and they may be considered the days up to the Armistice, the organ player at the motion picture theatre played what he fancied, letting his fingers wander over the keys until he became bored with the "Troubles of Tessie," and such, and he was poorly paid.

Now, however, the cost of music in its relation to the motion picture theatre, is one of the great expenses of the theatre owner. Good musicians, as a rule, are now employed in the larger orchestras and many movie patrons feel as if they are sitting through a "cold" picture, to use the vernacular of the projection room, if they are not entertained with orchestral music during the showing of the feature.

John Philip Sousa said recently, "The motion picture theatre has been of incalculable benefit in spreading a love for music."

The popular and the classical compositions have been brought closer together as a result. "Silent drama" patrons have begun to associate jazz and profound music as the producers have associated comedy and drama. The result has been educational as well as recreational.

"High brow music" has lost its stigma to a noticeable degree and "those who came to scoff have remained to pray." The scattering of the belief that classical music is tiresome has been stopped somewhat, and, with the raido, the gospel of good music has been spread for the better education of the modern American.

Central Alberta Crops Promise Rich Harvest

WHEAT WELL UP, MOISTURE IS SUFFICIENT

No Damage From Cutworms, Other Pests or Frost Reported

ABOUT ALL COARSE GRAIN IS SEEDED

Hay and Pasture Conditions Are Said to Be Excellent

"Old Man Grump" has certainly been put to rout by the crop reports just issued by the Canadian National Railways for the central Alberta farming area. No frosts, cutworms or other damage have been heard of and in many places the wheat is from six to eight inches high. Moisture is sufficient to abundant and everything augurs for a golden harvest in every sense of the word.

Practically all the coarse grain is seeded and in most places everything is above ground with the exception of greenfeed.

Farmers are plowing for summerfallow along the Unity branch, from Oban, Sask., to Wainwright, and report wheat growing well and looking good. Heavy rains have been experienced.

Rain Big Help

On the Viking division from Fabyan to Clover Bar the early grain was beaten down somewhat by hail but the setback was slight and has been made up for by the heavy rainfall. There is some green feed to sow.

Over three inches of rain fell over the whole Bashow branch during the past week and wheat is seven inches high in some places. Hay and pasture conditions are excellent. This takes in Bardo to Mirror.

Crops are considered nearly a week ahead of time on the Vegreville subdivision and some of the wheat is seven inches above soil. This district from Vermilion to Oliver experienced rather dry weather early in the season. A small portion of coarse grains are yet to be seeded.

Crops Week Early

Moisture enough for some weeks is reported on the Coronada branch from St. Paul to Duagh and wheat is from six to eight inches tall; crops are about a week early and prospects very bright. Some green feed is to be sown.

From Highgate to Vermilion on the Blackfoot subdivision the wheat is exceptionally healthy and strong, rainfall plentiful and seeding almost completed. No damage is reported.

Crops are coming along well and there have been several heavy showers on the Haight branch, from Inland to Haight.

Dermay subdivision, Yelgar to Dermay, reports 90 per cent. of the barley in the ground, soaking rains and bright prospects.

Growth is Rapid

Heavy rains have made fast growing crops and good prospects from Armona to Bretona on the Strathcona subdivision.

From Alliance to Camrose on the Alliance line the moisture conditions are the best possible. Wheat is healthy and most of the coarse grains are in.

Heavy rains at the end of May and plenty of moisture for several weeks is the good news from the Athabasca subdivision, Athabasca to Volmer. Seeding is practically completed excepting green feed, wheat looks vigorous and growthy and prospects are the best.

LOCAL YOUTHS SEEK FORTUNE IN FAR NORTH

George McLellan and George Gordon McLennan and George Buffun, two local youths, are leaving next Tuesday for the wide open spaces of the Copper Mine river which flows into the Arctic ocean on the other side of the barren lands. There they will take up trapping.

Supplies are being shipped under the care of the Hudson's Bay Company and the two expect to be gone until next February at least.

Some 30 years ago Mr. McLellan's father, N. McLellan, at present of Vancouver, came to Edmonton to seek his fortune and the same pioneer spirit that animated the father is now prompting the son to go into the sparsely settled sands. Mr. McLellan senior is now a prosperous grain merchant of the coast metropolis.

CITY TOURIST MISTAKEN FOR FAITH HEALER

waiting world that he had Aimee Semple McPherson located.

Exhausted by Trip

Mrs. Potter left Los Angeles on May 15, three days before the evangelist disappeared, and drove her heavy Studebaker sedan, with license No. Cal. 25-121 as far as Leduc, when, running into bad weather and heavy roads and the big machine being too much for her to handle, she hired a local driver to bring her into Edmonton.

Great Secrecy

"Don't print a word about this, boys, till I get my messages back," he asked newspapermen. "If you do they'll start off again and I'll have all the trouble of picking 'em up and getting my operators on the trail again. I've wired away to her mother to get some word from her and a full description, and when I've got that I'm going up to her and say, 'Aimee, I've just got word from mother. She wants you to go straight home.' You see, I won't be able to do anything else. She's not a criminal and there isn't any warrant out for her that I know of."

The "Inspector" was told the story couldn't be kept quiet.

"Then we'll have to put a watch on the car right away," he said.

"If they leave that car standing outside the hotel for half an hour they won't get away in it today," he said.

"Why not?" queried a reporter. "What will stop them?"

"Well, something is liable to happen to the engine, you know; you never can tell," said the "Inspector" with a smile.

Then he told of "shadowing the suspect".

"My operator and I—and she's the best operator I've known and particularly good on faces, pretended to look in the Mariposa beauty parlor when her car drove up. She got out and looked around like this (business of quick glances to right and left). Then the other car drove up and the man got out and looked at her as much as to say, 'It's all right. I'm here, too'. Then she saw us looking, and pulled her hat down over her eyes like this (another illustration and slipped into the hotel. Oh, we've got her all right!" and the "Inspector" threw himself back in his chair, crossed his legs, and fingered the shiny star.

Wires to California

Here's the wire the "Inspector" sent down south:

"Aimee Semple McPherson arrived here Friday, May 28, via Calgary, in car D-Cal. 24,121, Studebaker, followed by car D-Cal. 21-856, staying at Corona Hotel. Positively identified by three operators. McPherson known by sender while in Toronto. Wire instructions."

There's only one other thing. The "Inspector" says he is convinced that "Aimee is on her way home to her mother in Toronto."

"Yep, she's got into some scrape and she's headed home to mother," he said decisively.

"But isn't mother in California offering a reward?" asked a reporter.

"Oh, no, no," was the criminologist's reply, and he stuck to it till his "operative" read over some press clippings and admitted the newspaper man was right.

Police Say He's Wrong

"Well her boy's there maybe," conceded "Inspector" Middleton. The "inspector" was still sure he was right even after local police had investigated and looked over the records of the cars which were registered after their arrival from California and were convinced the "criminologist" was wrong.

The police don't know where Middleton got his title of "inspector," and they have no knowledge of the police schools from which he graduated. They even go so far as to say that he is of no assistance to them in spite of his high qualifications, which the "inspector" admits are as good as he can get and make him capable of handling any police force in the world.

Mistaken Identity?

That Mrs. Potter is the woman Middleton believed to be Mrs. McPherson is certain.

Middleton says the missing evangelist came through Leduc on May 28 and passed through to Edmonton the same day. He says she was travelling alone and being 'all in' on account of the heavy roads there hired a driver to bring her the rest of the way to Edmonton.

Mrs. Potter says she is the woman driver, he means. "I was 'all in' when I got to Leduc after driving myself from California and I did hire a boy to drive me in. I don't know his name but I think he was the barber there," she said today. "I came straight to the Corona and registered and I've been here ever since. There's no mystery about me. I'm ready to swear on a stack of bibles I'm Mrs. B. T. Potter, that my auto license number is California D 25-121 and that I'm what I say I am, a 49-year old woman trying to get along as best she can and follow her own line of business."

"Inspector" Middleton admitted this morning that he had sent out the wires which turned the searchers on the trail to Edmonton. He also admitted that he had called up Miss Argue, Penticostal missioner now operating in the city, and had asked for a full description of the evangelist, although he claims to have seen Mrs. McPherson several times personally and to know her by sight well.

He introduced himself as "Reverend" Middleton to Miss Argue, and claims to be entitled to this title also as he "was once a reverend."

"Miss Argue refused to talk to me or to give me any information. If the woman here is not Mrs. McPherson why would her followers refuse me a description of her?" queried "Inspector" Middleton to reporters this morning.

He's Criminologist

The inspector admits that he is a criminologist of note. He says he passed for a position as chief of police anywhere in the world. "I'm a Chicago man, see," he said, flipping back a coat lapel to show a shiny star which he covered again before the reporters could get a glimpse of it. But he is also of international fame for he also passed out as a police chief at Dublin, and he admits to experience in Scotland yard.

The title of "inspector," however, is just from the "English police force."

"I am a detective inspector," he admits. "Of course, though I'm better than that. I'm a criminologist. I'm up about as high as I can get now."

The office of the International Detective Bureau is on the second floor of the Hodge building, with no elevator.

NEW ATTORNEY GENERAL TALKS AT LUNCHEON

First Official Utterance Made Before Edmonton Underwriters

"I sometimes find it hard to find why I was asked to join the government", said Hon. J. F. Lymburn in the course of the first official speech as the provincial attorney general at the Edmonton Underwriters' luncheon this afternoon. Although he had had no previous thought of a political career, Mr. Lymburn said that he was able to make up his mind on short notice because he felt that every man is sometimes asked to give of his best for his country and because his view had been, for some time, that partyism had no place in provincial government.

Continuing, he urged that what the people of Alberta have to do is to find how to govern themselves in the most economical and efficient way. Partyism is not the correct standard by which to judge.

R. K. LEIGHTON FOUND GUILTY

Charged With Selling Furniture for Which He Had Not Paid

Richard K. Leighton was arraigned in the District court Friday before Judge Taylor on a charge of false pretences. He was found guilty and remanded for sentence until Monday.

It was alleged that last December Leighton purchased a quantity of furniture from the National Home Furnishers on the installment plan and agreed to deposit a certain amount "down" and to settle the balance on a monthly basis. Before the total amount had been given the Home Furnishers Leighton sold the furniture, but the purchaser never received the goods as they were seized by the company, Leighton having defaulted in his payments.

E. B. Cogswell, K.C., conducted the prosecution, and W. R. Howson defended.

Bylaw May Restrict Undertaking Houses

An amendment to the city bylaw is now in the hands of the bylaw committee of he city council which if passed will prevent the utilization of property in residential districts for funeral and undertaking parlors. Objection by neighbors was made some time ago to the old York house, 107th street, being turned into a funeral home, but the present bylaw only prevented the "erection" of a building for this purpose.

BRIDGE BUILDING WORK ON PRAIRIES WILL BE HEAVY

Exclusive to Bulletin

WINNIPEG, June 5.—Bridge construction work throughout the three prairie provinces promises this summer to be carried on by the highways department of the three governments on a scale unknown for many seasons. After appropriations were passed by the legislatures this spring, engineers were put to work to arrange for the details where highway construction is most needed. This takes several weeks and it will be towards the end of June before the contracts are awarded.

The iron works of Winnipeg are in a position to handle this now, and it is expected that it will result in renewed activities before the end of the month in these industries.

The first outdoor band concert of the season will be given at Borden Park, Sunday afternoon by the Laborers' Band. Commencing at 2.30 the band, under the baton of J. Olsen, will render a two-hour program of classical and popular music.

WIFE MANAGES HER HUSBAND'S RACING AUTO

She Would Rather Have Greasy Hands Than Be a Widow

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 5.—When Frank Elliot, one of the cleverest and most daring automobile racers in the United States, goes out on the track in contest for fame and the title of "Speed King," he has no fear that mechanical trouble, barring accidents, will cost him the victory.

His wife gives her O. K. before the Elliot machine is ready for the race.

Mrs. Elliot is the only woman in the world in charge of preparing racing automobiles for their battles of speed. Her husband and his corps of mechanics work under her direction. She is an expert automobile engineer.

In California, in 1922, Elliot was preparing for a race when his wife, who had some experience with racing cars herself and who was only a friend at that time, appeared on the scene. Elliott's car refused to function properly and the girl made the necessary repairs. That incident led to their romance and marriage.

The rules of the American Automobile Association, which governs speedway racing in this country, forbid a woman working in the pits during the race or going on the track. But during every race Mrs. Elliot sits in a box and directs the work of her husband's pitmen by signals. She is recognized as the only woman in the world who can [illegible] the [illegible] of the motor whether it is functioning right for racing.

"It seems a bit foolish that I am not allowed in the pits simply because I am a woman," Mrs. Elliot says. "But at least, they can't stop me from supervising the work of my husband's crew.

"But there's more to it than that. There is the knowledge that my husband is not being sacrificed because somebody overlooked a detail or forgot to attend to this, that, or the other thing.

"I'd rather have greasy hands than be a widow."

KNOCK IS CURED BY USING LEAD IN THE ENGINE

A knock is a knock under all circumstances, but under no circumstances can a knock in an automobile engine be justified. It should be rectified and to this end science has turned some of its best efforts. Compounds of lead, among the cheapest of metals, are the greatest foes of this menace to motors, while chlorides of gold and platinum are powerless to suppress it, according to a report by the American Chemical Society. Research has been made covering the whole field of anti-knock materials. Most efficient of preventives is said to be lead tetra-ethyl with lead diphenyl dimethyl second and lead diphenyl diethyl as third. Twenty-five compounds were classified in the report as anti-knock.

Five properties, according to the Five properties, according to the ideal anti-knock. The first is volatility, with the boiling point under 400 degrees centigrade. The second is that the amount of free metal liberated when the compound is heated in the air should be complete. The decomposition temperature should be between 200 and 300 degrees centigrade. Temperatures developed by oxidation of the metal should be high compared to ignition temperature of the fuel. The part[illegible] should [illegible] of colloidal size to favor rapid oxidation.

The knock in an automobile engine, it was explained, is supposed to be due to the fact that the burning of part of the gas mixture so compresses the unburned portion that this unburned portion becomes hot enough to ignite spontaneously.

The burning of the gas is analogous to the burning of a fire-cracker, which takes a finite time to happen, while the spontaneous ignition of the remaining gas is analogous to the explosion of the fire-cracker itself, which happens at almost infinite velocity.

The little particles of lead distributed throughout the gas mixture vastly increase the swiftness of the flame travel and make it possible for the flame to reach every part of the gas before it has a chance to ignite spontaneously.

Important to chemical science, it was said, was the finding by the investigators of a method of comparing one anti-knock with another.

Some elusive knocks are caused by loose cylinders or the nuts that hold the cylinders to the crank case and, in some cases [illegible] caused by the engine being loose in the frame.

WORRYING OVER FUEL SUPPLY? TOO MUCH OF IT

Producers Are Trying to Control Output, Without Much Success

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

Instead of finding ways to meet the ever-increasing demand for gasoline in this country, producers are getting so far ahead of themselves that they're trying to control the present output.

Out of more than 750,000,000 barrels of crude oil produced in this country, have come almost 11 billion gallons of gasoline. Improved cracking processes, less waste in production, and use of more natural gas gasoline, have brought this immense production far above what is needed for the automobiles and other engines of today.

And while there seems to be no sign of a drop in production there are some who are already turning their attention to the possibilities of other fuels for automobile engines. In fact, there is even more promise today of getting more gasoline out of a definite amount of crude oil than at any time heretofore.

Big Evaporation Waste

The demand for gasoline last year reached a little more than nine billions of gallons. More than a billion gallons of gasoline have evaporated from the excess crude oil produced last year.

That's why producers want to curtail their production.

"There has been a real overproduction far beyond our economic needs," says Dr. Gustav Egloff, prominent mining engineer of America. "The fundamental cause has been the marvelous technical achievement of the cracking process for producing gasoline from heavy oils.

Cracking Raises Yield

"Without this process our needs for crude oil would be more than a billion barrels for 1926 instead of the 500,000,000 barrels now required.

"The earth should remain the storehouse for this natural wealth until needed by man. Instead of continuing the present wasteful methods of storage, we should run the oil into the pipe line and immediately into the refinery to be processed into cracked gasoline and other products."

The world's production of crude oil last year was 1,066,000,000 barrels, of 42 gallons each, an increase of 5.2 per cent over the peak of 1923. Almost three-fourths of this came from American soil.

BUSES INCREASE GAS CONSUMPTION

NEW YORK, June 5.—The increased use of busses in this country is causing a noticeable jump in annual gasoline consumption.

One bus in constant operation consumes from 10 to 20 times as much gasoline a year as the average pleasure car.

The 70,000 busses in operation in the United States last year [illegible] 000,000 gallons of gasoline, a supply sufficient for 700,000 pleasure cars.

The busses covered a total distance of 1,900,000,000 miles and the gasoline consumption [illegible] has been estimated at from 4,000 to 10,000 gallons.

The rapid expansion of bus service lines is expected to show a greater increase in gasoline consumption during this year.

NEW REFLECTOR FOR AUTO LIGHTS

[illegible] June 5.—An automobile headlight reflector has been [illegible] by the U. S. federal research physicist which will not lose its reflective efficiency when exposed to temperature changes or weather conditions.

The reflectors are electroplated with chromium. The development is the result of two year's experiments [illegible]

The [illegible] plated surface is so hard that the ordinary emery grinding compounds used for polishing would not touch it and it was necessary to devise a new polishing [illegible]

[illegible] engineering [illegible] and because it does not tarnish, chromium plating possibly will have important commercial applications other than being used for automobile headlight reflectors.

FAST BRAKING WILL PREVENT FEW ACCIDENTS

This Is Opinion of Many Engineers Who Have Studied Situation

The evils of automobile speed will be solved speedily by speedier braking systems. This may sound like one of the latest tongue twisters designed to determine the quality of the liquor one has been drinking. In reality, it is a conviction of engineers who have given considerable study to the enormous problems of utilizing the tremendous speed of the automobile with safety.

More progress has been made in braking systems within the last two years than at any time during motordom's history, yet safety experts point out that the greatest problem scarcely has been touched—that of reducing the time required to bring the more efficient braking systems into operation. In other words, paraphrasing an idiom of the old west, the motorist is not sufficiently "quick on the pedal."

The figures they offer are striking. If a car is travelling thirty miles an hour, for instance, a second's delay in bringing brakes into play means one is forty-four feet closer to the object one is trying to [illegible]. At sixty miles an hour [illegible] the figures are doubled. This second often is the most important in the motorist's life. Several solutions to the problem are offered.

"Abolish accelerators and brake pedals," the more radical reformers urge. In one popular make of car the conventional service brake has been combined with the clutch pedal as a means of reducing the time in [illegible] operation. Another car [illegible] accidents as [illegible] radical proposal does [illegible] be the panacea [illegible].

Most engineers, however, [illegible] agree that abolition of the [illegible] ator would be desirable [illegible]. Accidents, they admit, are traceable to one's stepping on the accelerator instead of the brake in attempting to make a sudden stop. This, however, is offset by the safety features of the accelerator in providing for quick getaway and enabling drivers to keep both hands on the wheel or to attend to gear shifting.

Suggestions have been made for complicating the action of the accelerator whereby unintentional excessive pressure suddenly applied, would [illegible] off the gasoline supply.

Those who are looking ahead see the accelerator of the future conveniently attached to the rim of the steering wheel. It will be hand operated for the reason that the transmission will be entirely automatic if not [illegible].

A vital psychological [illegible] ports those who [illegible] pose elimination of the foot brake pedal. It is the strong impulse to step on something when one is called upon for a quick stop. This school declares th[illegible] removed from the f[illegible] automobile, it should [illegible] erator.

With nothing for the [illegible] right foot [illegible] service brake pedal [illegible] the stopping would be more effective. The element of hesitation would be greatly reduced. There [illegible] no possibility of [illegible] press anything [illegible] when desiring to stop.

The [illegible] ever do not picture the sort of brake pedal seen [illegible]. This conventional device, in their opinion, is much too [illegible]. In the picture of the future [illegible] presses on a button, which in turn, sets into operation an electric or compressed air system of brakes. This system, however, may be but an intermediary, the actual operation of the brake shoes or bands being mechanical or hydraulic.

The aim will be to make it as simple as possible to bring the braking system into play, and nothing has ever surpassed the simplicity of button control.

In the future automobile the brake button would be located in such a way as to take advantage of the old-age instinct of pressing on the floor boards when desiring to stop. The button would be just where the conventional foot brake pedal is today, except that being down to the floor level the driver would not lose any time needlessly raising his foot.

Some provision, of course, would have to be made to take care of the matter of graduating the stop. To have the brakes take hold with maximum force at the first touch of the button would be intolerable for ordinary stopping, although ideal in an emergency. This problem could be solved through the use of superimposed control buttons so that a moderate pressure would bring into play only a medium braking force, and a maximum pressure would bring into instant action the maximum braking power.

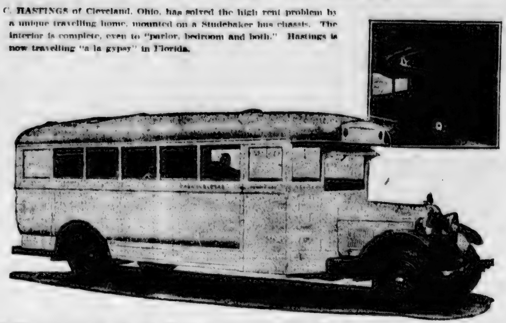
"House on Wheels" Foils Landlord

G. C. HASTINGS of Cleveland, Ohio, has solved the high rent problem by a unique travelling home, mounted on a Studebaker bus chassis. The interior is complete, even to "parlor, bedroom and both." Hastings is now travelling "a la gypsy" in Florida.



"DOWN with landlords and high rents", declared G. C. Hastings, of Cleveland, Ohio, and set forth to provide himself not only with a complete domicile of his own, but one which he could move at will from north to south, following the seasons, or from east to west to see the country.

Every day he can have a new door-yard, a new vista from his dining room window. For, on a Studebaker bus chassis he has built his "Casa en Ruedas", or "house on wheels".

Not a makeshift trailer—this—nor a great, unwieldy truck of grotesque appearance containing limited and crude household appurtenances. Its exterior resembles a large limousine. Within are living room, dining room, bedroom, kitchenette, shower bath and lavatory.

Folding tables make of the living room a sumptuous diner. Side seats flatten down along either wall into lower beds while upper berths let down like those of a Pullman, changing the same room to a sleeping compartment.

Does it snow and blow, up north? A few hours' travel and the Gulf of Mexico smiles sunnily in the front yard. Do pine woods call? A few more hours' travel and a sparkling northwoods lake lies just beyond the "front steps" with the forest primeval all about.

Good-bye, rent—for owners of a "housecar".

PLACING NEW TIRES TO GET BEST MILEAGE

Best Should Be on Rear Wheels in Order to Obtain Good Traction

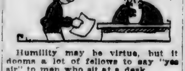
There is some difference of opinion among tire owners as to whether the two best tires should be placed on the front wheels or on the rear. One group contends that the best tires should be on the front, to eliminate or minimize the danger of losing control of the car in case of a blowout while traveling at a high rate of speed.

Experience, gained by driving millions of tire miles under observation by prominent tire men, proves that the danger from this source is negligible and is in every case the fault of the driver in losing his head.

Efficient operation of a car requires good traction and for this reason the best tires should be on the rear wheels. The tires that are more worn should be on the front wheels.

In the case of a new, or virtually new, spare tire, this should be used in the following manner. At the end of several thousand miles of driving examine the rear tires and select the one that shows the most wear and remove it, replacing it with the spare. Repeat this operation.

On new cars where usually there are five new tires, they may remain in their original positions until several thousand miles have elapsed, then the front tires should be put on the rear wheels and vice versa. The fifth new tire should have its regular turn on the car.



Humility may be virtue, but it dooms a lot of fellows to say "yes sir" to men who sit at a desk.

Romantic Castle Gives Name To Royal Family

Windsor Only One In Europe For Nearly Nine Centuries A Residence of Sovereigns

And Site Was Home of Saxon King Harold Before Conquest And is Legendary Site of King Arthur's Court Where Knights of Round Table Feasted

ANCIENT PILE WILL STAND CENTURIES MORE

Three years after war was declared, King George summoned his Privy Council to Buckingham Palace. He had a momentous announcement to make to them, one which allied the Royal Family more closely than ever with the British people. He declared his intention of renouncing, for himself and his family, all association with foreign titles. In future, he said, his house would be known as the House of Windsor.

It was an action which won empire-wide approval, but it was an amazing one for all that, for it meant that at one motion of the hand all the results of the German tendencies of the last fifty years of Queen Victoria's reign were wiped out. All the high sounding Germanic titles fell by the wayside. A daughter of Queen Victoria was the first to act. Princess Henry of Battenburg became once again Princess Beatrice. Two of Queen Mary's brothers changed their names. The Duke of Teck, Constable of Windsor Castle, became the Marquis of Cambridge; Prince Alexander of Teck became the Earl of Athlone. Prince Louis of Battenburg, a famous British sailor, and First Sea Lord when war broke out, became Marquis of Milford Haven. Prince Louis Francis of Mountbatten; and Prince Alexander of Battenburg became the Marquis of Carisbrooke. These were only a few of the changes which took place at the same time as the Royal Family adopted its new and lofty title of Windsor. It is curious to note that now a younger son of King George's sons, as for instance, a younger son of the Duke of York, will be simply a peer and his son plain Mr. Windsor.

There was very good judgment shown in selecting the name of Windsor for the Royal line, for no other castle in existence has had such close association with the throne. When the Norman William selected the little chalk hill on which to erect the fortress of Windsor, he discovered that it had been the property of the ill-fated King Harold, the Saxon, whom he had defeated at the Battle of Hastings. It was one of two castles he built, the other was the Tower at London, which in turn was fortress, prison and palace. Windsor, because of its strong position, was never besieged as was the Tower of London, and it has the proud record of eight and a half centuries of unbroken history as a royal residence.

Merry Windsor.

It has a happy history, too, this great old Castle at Windsor. The Tower of London is drenched in tears and it is haunted with unhappy ghosts. The Tower seems to have a soul that is heavy with its terrible memories. But Windsor is a merry place, and has held the courts of nearly two score of British monarchs. The place is in such excellent order now that it will probably still be a place of romance and veneration in the year 2000.

The main entrance is through a lovely old Tudor gateway, called the Henry VIII Gate, built by Bluff King Hal, and through it he rode with each of his wives in turn. All but one went out from it with fear and hopelessness in her heart. It has echoed to the merry laughter of pretty Anne Boleyn, who changed the sober tenor of court life within its walls to gaiety, but she left the castle for the scaffold.

She bequeathed England her daughter, Queen Elizabeth, who loved the castle and gathered about her all the great spirits of her day, including Shakespeare. The great North Terrace, which has been the favorite promenade of sovereigns for three hundred years, was built by her and upon it she erected a great Gallery, now the royal Library, in which was acted "The Merry Wives of Windsor," which Shakespeare wrote in two weeks' time, at her command, after she had confided to him that she wanted to see Old Falstaff in love.

Edward III., the first king born in the Castle, who was known as Edward of Windsor, was ambitious to found an order of chivalry along the lines of the famous Round Table of King Arthur's court which, by the way, according to tradition was held in a castle on the site of Windsor Castle. For this purpose he built the Great Tower, which dominates the Castle and gives it the familiar and characteristic skyline. At least one great banquet was held here at which the knights sat with their backs to the rounded walls and were served from the center. The tower was built by William of Wykeham who was recompensed with the magnificent sum of one shilling a day, which was increased to two shillings a day when he travelled. Edward of Windsor founded the noble order of the Knights of the Garter with its famous motto "Honi soit qui mal y pense," or "evil be to him who [illegible] thinks." Everyone knows the [illegible] of its origin [illegible] the Countess of Salisbury's garter, but the real origin is believed to have been that the Knights of Edward III. who fought with him in Palestine wore white garters below their knees to distinguish them from the knights of other nations. It stands first among all the orders of chivalry throughout the world and consists of the Sovereign and twenty-five others. Each Knight, upon his installation, is accorded one of the stalls which were established by Edward III. in St. George's Chapel which he rebuilt. [illegible] order from the time of its creation and read like [illegible] history.

Has Royal Graves

The loveliness of St. George's Chapel is almost as striking as its history. It was completed by Henry VII., and like his Chapel at Westminster, has an exquisite [illegible] of fan tracery. It contains the tombs of many interesting people, including Charles Brandon who battled the high handed Princess Mary, Queen of France, sister of Henry VIII, and Charlotte, Princess of Wales, the only daughter of George IV, who died in childbirth, [illegible] who would have been Queen instead of Queen Victoria, and also that King Henry VIII. It was on a sad January night in 1649 that four devoted friends carried a coffin from St. George's Hall to the chapel to inter the body of King Charles I, who had been beheaded in London and hurried away to Windsor. During the Commonwealth his grave was lost and discovered only in 1813. When his coffin was [illegible] his body was so well preserved that [illegible] his features [illegible] from his portraits. Behind St. George's Chapel is the Albert Memorial Chapel which was restored by Queen Victoria in the utmost beauty which money and art could produce as a memorial to her husband. The old building which dates from the days of Henry III was [illegible] by Henry VII who intended [illegible] his tomb. [illegible] Henry VIII decided to beautify it for his own [illegible] and [illegible] Cardinal Wolsey [illegible] it for himself and spent a fortune on making it sufficiently magnificent for his resting place [illegible]. The sarcophagus which he had purchased for his own use was put in storage and [illegible] after the death of Nelson. It was placed [illegible] of St. Paul's. Under the chapel is a tomb [illegible] out of the chalk by George III [illegible] British kings, including Edward VII, a queen and a host of princes and princesses. Their coffins are laid away on marble shelves and the [illegible] upon a [illegible] table [illegible] within the door.

Across the open space known as the Lower Ward, and against twelfth century walls is a row of twenty-six houses for the Military Knights of Windsor, pensioners of the Knights of the Garter. They were originally called the Poor Knights and in return for their pensions were required to attend service daily in St. George's Chapel.

The Palace

The east half of the Castle is a great Quadrangle built around three sides with dwelling apartments. This great group was founded by Edward III and it is said they were paid for out of the ransom of two [illegible] whom Edward held as hostages at Windsor, after capturing them in battle, King John of France, and King Malcolm of Scotland. In the north wing are the state apartment, in the east front the private apartments of the royal family, and in the south wing the apartments for visitors. The Reception Room in the north wing is one of the finest rooms in Europe. Recently it was proposed to renew the gilding on its decorations and it was estimated that $10,000 worth of gold leaf was required. Economy in the royal circle prohibited this so it was polished off instead, when to the astonishment of everybody it was found that underneath the tarnish of a century the gold shone out as brilliantly as ever.

The [illegible] throne room contains the [illegible] silver gilt throne of the King of Candy in Ceylon, and the banquet hall, two hundred feet long, has a magnificent Oriental rug, the largest in the world, made for Queen Victoria by convicts in India. It is so heavy that it required sixty men to remove it from the hall to the quadrangle for cleaning purposes.

One of the finest rooms is the Waterloo Chamber which contains [illegible] of that decisive battle. It was built in an old court and required special architectural treatment to provide light so it appears after the fashion of the cabin of a ship, much to the delight of the old sailor king, William IV.

[illegible] romantic room in this wing is Charles II's dining room, lavishly decorated with Grinling Gibbons carvings representing [illegible] fish or another fowl or [illegible] fruit and on the fourth [illegible]. In this room Charles [illegible] gay little [illegible] and here he feasted the King of Bantam from Java, wh[illegible] popular in England.

Not the least interesting of the [illegible] visitors Windsor Castle has sheltered was the late King of [illegible] was the guest of King Edward. He was then about [illegible] and had forty-one [illegible] hundred of [illegible] most of [illegible].

[illegible] Windsor to be "the most romantic castle [illegible]" [illegible] its romance has [illegible] and brighter [illegible] have been [illegible] tragic [illegible] in the loveliness of its location, the noble proportions of its walls, and the dignity of its towers.

PART OF WINDSOR CASTLE PHOTOGRAPHED FROM THE AIR

About one-half of the ancient Windsor Castle is shown in the picture, the hill surmounted by the Round Tower and the Great Quadrangle. The north wing of the palace, near the top of the picture, contains the state apartments; adjoining are the private apartments of the royal family, and the south wing, coming next, contains apartments for visitors and the great state entrance. In the lower part of the picture are the Royal Mews with accommodation for one hundred horses and forty carriages.

Sun and Water First Used to Measure Time

Musings of Alfred the Great Made Him Burn the Cakes But Produced First Lanterns

Clocks were once gifts only for kings and queens--Monks invented first alarms to rouse them for their devotions

USE PHONOGRAPHIC VOICES IN CLOCKS

Alfred the Great, the King who burned the cakes and created the British Navy, accidently invented the lantern, too. In his day and generation there were no such things as clocks. Alfred felt the need of some arrangement for measuring time so he invented a candle clock. It consisted of a set of six candles, each twelve inches long. Each candle was marked off in inch spaces, each inch burning for twenty minutes. Thus the six candles lasted for twenty-four hours. Special chaplains were appointed in the royal court to watch these candles and report the progress of time to the monarch. Alfred found that when the wind blew the candles burned much faster, so he created a case of horn in wooden frames, and there was our first lantern!

The simplist elements of our modern life would have astonished our forefathers beyond belief. The possession of a modern alarm clock at the court of Alfred the Great would have changed the tide of history; a telephone in the days of Edward the Confessor would have made its operator a monarch of renown; a typewriter at the court of Henry VII, a motor car presented to Queen Elizabeth. Absurd to contemplate, of course, yet the very absurdity of it reminds us of the advancement which our ancestors have made, and the conveniences and comforts they have bequeathed to us. We profit by the labor and the experiences of scores of generations and with our inheritance we have acquired the responsibility of living up to the standard they have set for us and turning out corresponding a greater proportion of work. But sometimes some of us wonder just how much happier we are on the treadmill of life which all these clever and investigating ancestors of ours have put us.

It was in the later part of the thirteenth century that clocks came into practical use, for before that time they had been regarded as curiosities. The first public clock in England was set up in Westminster in a tower close to the site of the present clock tower of the parliament buildings, in 1288, with the funds exacted as a fine from a corrupt Lord Chief Justice. Thereafter several famous churches in England acquired clocks, such as Glastonbury Abbey, Wells Cathedral, St. Alban's Cathedral and so on. Actually works of some of these clocks have survived to the present day and are occasionally set going in the London museums.

The earliest known method of measuring time was the sun-dial is said to have been invented by the Babylonians, and it is a fact that a sun-dial is mentioned in the second book of Kings in connection with the episode in which King Ahaz asked Isaiah for a sign. Isaiah asks whether he would choose to have the shadow on the sun-dial advance ten degrees, or turn back ten degrees, and the King chooses the latter. It is believed that the dial referred to in this incident was built in the form of a flight of steps with an obelisk at the top, the shadow of which moved with the sun, indicating the hour of the day.

Water Clocks

Water clocks came next and were used by the Greeks and Romans. They consisted of glass or earthenware vessels of a known capacity which were filled with water. This was allowed to drop through holes pierced in the end. There was a famous example of this kind of clock which operated by the flow of the water a little mechanical figure, whose hand was raised to point out the hours painted on a little pillar.

These water clocks were called clepsydra and were the earliest known mechanical contrivances for measuring time. The first record of one of these clocks striking the hours is in the reference to a gift of one to Charlmagne from Haroun al Raschid.

Later came the development of the wheels and weights in clocks and by the fourteenth century, clocks came into more common use.

One of the quaintest of these fourteenth century clocks is that in the lovely old Cathedral of Wells, in England. The original works have been removed to the Kensington museum in London, but can still be operated, and the fascinating dials and striking devices in the cathedral have been provided with duplicate works.

The dial of this clock, which is set up in one of the transcepts of the Cathedral, consists of a painted surface which indicates not only the hours, but the age of the moon, the position of the planets and the ebb and flow of the tides. Over the clock is a little platform upon which is a double circle of mounted knights in the costumes and armour of the fourteenth century. When the clock strikes the hours the eight knights dash out fully armed against each other as the platform revolves. As they pass they strike with their lances as many times as correspond to the hour.

A little distance away on the wall is a curious figure of an old man with a bell hung before him, on which he strikes the hour, and with his heels he kicks the quarter hours on little bells under his feet. Outside on the side wall of the Cathedral is the figure of a knight who strikes the hours by dashing a lance against a shield.

This is considered the most interesting clock in existence as it is also the oldest self-striking clock. The original works of this clock were in use for over five centuries.

Best Known Clock

The most noted public clock in the world is that in the clock tower of the House of Parliament in Westminster, London, which is familiarly known as Big Ben, though actually that name originally applied only to the big bell which strikes the hours and which weighs thirteen and a half tons. Certainly the mellow voice of this famous bell has boomed its way farther out into the world than that of any other clock bell in existence. From London several times a day the voice of Big Ben is broadcasted by radio not only to the British Isles but to the continent of Europe and other parts of the world. One Englishman, to whom it probably brought memories of Whitehall and the Strand, wrote from his post five hundred miles south of Cairo in Egypt to say that he had heard Big Ben there by radio. Big Ben, the clock, goes for seven days at a time, but it requires two hours every week to wind it up. The dials of the clock are twenty-two and a half feet in diameter. The minute hands are fourteen feet long and the hour hands nine feet long. The tower itself is 316 feet high and forty feet square.

Canada's biggest clock tower is that in the famous City Hall at Toronto, and is not so much lower than that in London, being three hundred feet high. The dials are twenty and a half feet in diameter. It has three bells, the largest weighing nearly twelve hundred pounds. The clock was made in Croydon, England, and installed at the close of the nineteenth century.

Royal Gifts

In the early days of clock history they were reserved as gifts for great and distinguished persons and for royalty. Queen Elizabeth had quite a collection of them, twenty-four in all, and her unfortunate rival, Mary Queen of Scots, had a very beautiful little one from her husband, the Dauphin of France, and besides had another made of crystal carved in the shape of a death's head. Elizabeth's mother, the pretty and unhappy Anne Boleyn, received from Henry VIII at the time of her marriage the gift of a beautiful little gilt clock, ten inches high, inscribed with the entwined initials of their two names. This clock in the centuries since then has been sought after by collectors and was purchased from the collection of Horace Walpole by Queen Victoria, who started the famous royal collection now in Windsor Castle. Most of her finest clocks she bequeathed to King Edward who also had a keen taste for antique clocks, of which there are still more than two hundred and fifty in Windsor Castle alone. Several volumes have been written on their history. Most of them are in good working order, including Anne Boleyn's.

Hampton Court Clock

There is another clock, built for Henry VIII which has a strange tradition attached to it. It is in Hampton Court Palace, and it is said that it invariably stops prior to the death of some inmate of the old palace, even to this day, and this tradition is firmly believed by those who live there.

Most of the occupants of Hampton Court Palace are pensioners of the king, people of gentle birth who have fallen on evil times, and faithful servitors whose final days are made happy in the peaceful surroundings of the sixteenth century palace.

By the year sixteen hundred clocks were being made to sell at a price within the [illegible] of the average [illegible] and Holland began exporting them to the other European countries and to America.

Historic Clocks

There is a curious carriage watch still in existence which belonged to the unhappy Charles I. This little clock, four and a half inches in diameter, is of solid silver ornamented with filigree and is in a very fine copper and leather outer case. The clock goes for thirty-six hours and strikes the hours and has only one hand to indicate the time. In the battle of Worcester seven thousand of the King's men fell prisoners to Cromwell's troops and the King's royal carriage, which was taken on the field, was found to contain this watch. It found its way to Cromwell who kept it as a personal possession. After the restoration the watch fell into the hands of an ancestor of Rudyard Kipling and the family has preserved it ever since.

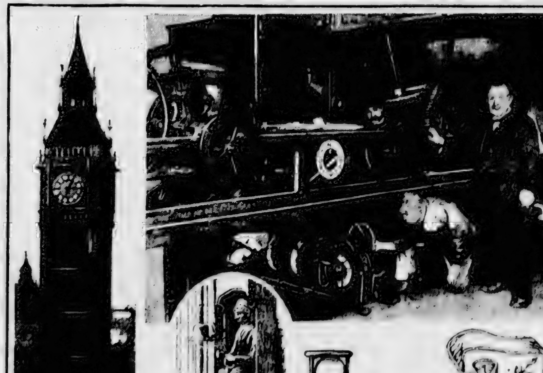
Another fascinating clock is that which belonged to Napoleon and [illegible] is said to destroy an illusion [illegible] by the little corporal's admirers. It had been a tradition that Napoleon was able to command sleep at any time and also that he could control his awakening. The little gilded bronze clock, however, tells another tale for it is equipped with an alarm which shows that Napoleon did not depend entirely upon his own powers. He carried this little clock on all his campaigns.

Alarms Invented by Monks

Alarm clocks which today we associate with early morning yawns were invented by the monks as a means of awakening themselves in preparation for their devotions which began in the very early morning. [illegible] in some cases were continuous, one monk relieving another before the altars of their chapels at all hours of the day and night.

Modern Swiss watchmakers who make such exquisitely beautiful examples of clocks and watches, have succeeded in inventing an instrument which has neither face nor hands. When a button is pushed by means of a phonographic arrangement a voice announces the hour and the minute.

There is a curious little clock in The Grange, the Toronto Art Gallery, which is set into an oil painting of a landscape of a rural scene with a clock tower. The dial of the clock replaces the painted clock and actually tells the time.



IT TAKES THIS GREAT MACHINE TO MOVE A CLOCK

The central picture above show some of the works of Big Ben, the great clock of the British House of Parliament. At the left is the clock tower containing Big Ben, and at the right is the Canadian Big Ben, in the clock tower of the City Hall at Toronto. Below is the little man on the wall of Wells Cathedral who strikes the hours with his heels and upon the bell before him.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

Henry Ford, the most successful [illegible] world, has been quoted as saying that sometimes dishonest men succeed, but in order to do so they must perform some real service to the world.

There is no doubt that dishonest men often do win money success. And because they do many other people try for the same kind of success, feeling satisfied if they can square themselves with their consciences afterward.

That is often possible. I have known many men who justified irregular transactions because they meant to use some of the money they made for gifts to charity.

What Mr. Ford means by success is of course, money success which, if it is won dishonestly, cannot be considered success at all.

I have known others who explained to themselves and their friends that if they had not engaged in crooked deals somebody else would.

But Mr. Ford was able to build up one of the biggest industries in the world without any dishonesty.

So have thousands of other men, who today do not need to take the trouble to explain to themselves that they have been as honest as they could be under the circumstances.

No dishonesty of any kind is justifiable.

Most men who have prospered through dishonesty would have prospered just as much or more if they had conducted their business on principles of decency and square dealing.

The cheat cheats nobody as much as he cheats himself.

He is continually on the defensive against himself as long as his conscience remains alive, against other people when he has finally killed it.

[illegible] "Am I my brother's keeper?" [illegible] have committed all sorts of rascalities and tried to account for them on grounds of necessity.

The best argument against dishonesty is that nearly all the great successes have been accomplished without it.

It is a very hopeful and encouraging indication of progress that the honest [illegible]

Mr. Ford [illegible] success gained by dishonesty. He merely admits that it exists and insists that something more than mere rascality is needed to achieve it.

But his own example proves how futile it is, for there must have been [illegible] builders who tried to imitate him, and sell a poor product in the hope of stealing some of his trade, and who have gone down to failure as a result.

"Be good and you will be happy," is not an infallible rule. But "Be honest and you will stand a better chance of succeeding," is a rule that every young man will do well to follow.

NEIGHBORS' WIVES

ERNEST LYNN, author of THE YELLOW STUB

BEGIN HERE TODAY

John and Fay Milburn to whom a baby girl has just been born, buy a home of their own when the advertising agency in which John is a partner and copy writer, lands an important contract.

Previous chapters told how John, while Fay was in the hospital, met Nell Orme at a party and was attracted by her beauty and puzzled to hear from gossips that Nell was having trouble with her husband. [illegible], who has a wife and three children, hints to John that he is dissatisfied with his own marriage.

Dr. Menefee, who is John's best friend, gets married to Margaret Wayne, and Clara Wayne, Margaret's younger sister runs away and marries Clifton Lane, whom John cordially dislikes.

Working late one evening John encounters Eleanor Mason, an acquaintance on his way to dinner, and invites her to come along. Fay learns about it through Mrs. Henry Blodgett, a neighbor, who had seen John and Eleanor together, and there is a quarrel.

Christmas Eve arrives and John and Fay decorate a tree for Judith. Both are lonely at the thought of spending Christmas away from their people in Chicago.

Margaret spoke up. "He had a girl with him," she said.

"You'd never guess. Eleanor Mason."

Fay shot John a swift look but he saw it coming and stared interestedly at his glass.

"Was she [illegible] drinking too?" Fay asked.

"What a useless question in connection with Eleanor Mason," observed Clara Lane. "Why not ask whether a fish swims?"

"Being a lawyer himself," Dick went on to explain, "Paul got off with a fine and managed to keep the thing out of the papers."

"Poor old Paul," said John, [illegible] his head. "Always getting in a [illegible]." He raised his glass and drained it. "Oh well," he murmured softly, "those who [illegible] the paper."

This is truly incredible. . . . Where was Gilda Gray? And Babe Ruth? And Bubbling Over? And Lady Cathcart?

In view of what happened, it might have been less embarrassing for Coolidge if the boys had called off the Pennsylvania election on account of wet grounds.

BALL GAMES

There are two ball games scheduled for this evening. At Diamond park, at 6.30, the Centrals and the Elks will meet in the Independent Baseball league fixture.

At the South Side Athletic grounds, Henry Boulanger and his boys, the Yeomen, tangle with the Brewery at 7 o'clock.

NEW YORK, June 5.—The two-year-old racing to date in the metropolitan circuit has been unusually interesting. Some very smart thoroughbreds of both sexes have earned brackets and many are still under cover.

The best of this division, as a rule, is seen in action each year before the conclusion of the spring Belmont meeting, and it is reasonable therefore to expect that high class sport will continue to hold public interest and meet through that at the popular Aqueduct track, which is to follow.

Pitchers react according to their peculiar types of temperament when they lost tough games in an important series.

As a rule, star performers like Johnson, Mathewson, Alexander, Bender, et al, are more philosophical [illegible] curse fate so much after defeat. Possibly this is not because of their superior temper, but the fact that they were usually on the winning end.

I've known some pitchers to almost wreck the bench and [illegible] to give vent to their feelings [illegible] losing a game.

Home Green at Muirfield Where British Amateur Golf Title Was Contested

Many a bitter struggle was waged on the home green of the Muirfield course when Americans and Britons clashed for supremacy in the annual British amateur golf classic this week. And many a disappointment cropped out at the same hole as some pastimer or other fell by the wayside with victory in sight.

RIXEY, CALLED VENERABLE, IS FAR FROM OLD

Tall Pitcher of Reds as Little Ancient as Any Games Hoariest Vets

NEW YORK, June 5.—Since seeing Eppa Rixey [illegible] fied as [illegible] old-timers, compared to whom Dr. Rixey is a kid, must feel like asking what age-portraying adjective would fit them. Also why is Dr. Rixey "venerable" when Jack [illegible] Adams, Adolfo Luque, [illegible] and Bob Shawkey are not.

Rixey is tall, long-legged and has a stoop. Crossing a campus or elsewhere amid cloistered walls, he might easily be mistaken for the college president—tall, spare, lean and benign—yet he drives as mean a [illegible] in the game, and is as little ancient or venerable in physical skill and mental alertness as any of the old-timers in the game.

In point of fact, he is younger in years than Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Eddie Collins, Adolfo Luque, Grover Hartley, Jack Quinn, Walter Johnson, Zack Wheat, Heinie Groh, Bob Shawkey, Wallie Schang, Grover [illegible] Peckinpaugh and Bill Jacobson, and nobody thinks of any of these as aged, spavined, bowed with years or touched with arterio sclerosis.

Wh[illegible] distinction of antediluvianism as applied to the good and capable Dr. Rixey? They doctor is 35, Luque 36, Wheat 37, Maranville 34, Carey 36, Adams 36, Shawkey 36, Adams 42, Quinn 39, Johnson 40, Cob 39, Hartley 38, Groh 36, Speaker 38, Faber 37, Collins 38, Peckenpaugh 35, Jacobson 35, Sherrod Smith 34, Cooper 34, Dauss 36, Alexander 39, Coveleskie 34 and never an antediluvian among these others.

FREDDIE THE SHEIK

He'd Like a Different Disposition.

I TOOK MY LAUNDRY AROUND TO THAT PLACE YOU TOLD ME TO YOU KNOW AUNTIE THAT WIDOW—
I'M GLAD YOU DID I UNDERSTAND SHE'S HAVING A HARD TIME OF IT AND SHE HAS TO SUPPORT HERSELF AND DAUGHTER
THE DAUGHTER MUST BE A PEACH TO GET HIM TO CHANGE LAUNDRIES
I DIDN'T LIKE THE HERO IN THAT PICTURE. THE IDEA OF A MAN BEING IN LOVE WITH TWO GIRLS AT ONCE
YEAH, BUT THEY WERE BOTH NICE GIRLS IRMA
WHAT DIFFERENCE DOES IT MAKE? A MAN CAN ONLY LOVE ONE GIRL
MAYBE HE HAD A HARD TIME FINDING OUT WHICH ONE HE LIKED THE BEST
THE WAY YOU TALK, DEFENDING A MAN WHO TRIES TO HAVE TWO LOVE AFFAIRS
IT HAS NOTHING TO DO WITH US IRMA. WHY GET PEEVED?
GEE I WISH IRMA HAD A DISPOSITION LIKE THAT LAUNDRY LADY'S DAUGHTER

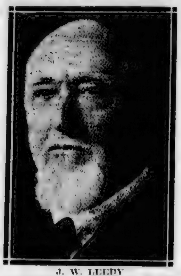
Local Banks: Credit for All Classes. The Reason Why Canada Is Not a Creditor Nation



J. W. LEEDY
Ex-Governor and Senator of Kansas

J. W. LEEDY, announces himself as a people's candidate for election to the Provincial Legislature, having been solicited by a number of citizens who have voluntarily broken old party ties and who seldom exercise the right of franchise.

I believe that I represent constructive and progressive policies that the intelligent voter, as well as the majority of the 50 per cent non-voting population, will find it to their interest to support.

Voters who fail to vote because of a lack of interest in the weak and abortive policies put forth by the old line parties, are, most, frequently the leaders of intelligence and thought in the community and therefore should be aroused, to their duty and responsibility, to the State and to their descendants.

It is generally recognized that the lack of population is what retards the progress of the country. To remedy this we have spent in the last five years more than ten millions of dollars with the result that we have almost 500,000 immigrants. During that time we have had an equal number of Canadian citizens emigrate to the United States; and that the number is not decreasing is shown by the latest returns of the Immigration Department of the United States. For the fiscal year ending July 1, 1925, 100,525 Canadian citizens emigrated to the United States, and 2,127 emigrated from the United States. Whether they came back to Canada or went elsewhere does not appear. From July 1, 1925, to March 1, 1926, 60,128 Canadians settled in the United States and [illegible] emigrated. For the month of February of this year 6,087 Canadians went to the United States with the declared intention of settling there and 82 departed.

It would seem from these figures which are from the official records and can be verified, that this is not a temporary condition but one that will continue unless conditions change. This suggests the query, "What is the bait that lures Canadians to the United States?"

Our lands are new and much cheaper in price. They produce more bushels to the acre and of a better quality, so the cause does not arise from natural conditions. It is the difference in the credit condition of the two countries that makes our young people go to the States where credit conditions give better opportunities for a young man struggling to make a start in life to get on his feet. While our system waits until he has done so before he is given any help. When our banking system was established so little was thought of our agricultural possibilities that no credit was allowed to be given by banks on the security of farm produce until said products had passed into the hands of a dealer. The law stood this way until 1912 when it was changed to allow grain raised on the farm and livestock to be taken. In practice this is only done with large farmers, and the small farmer struggling to make a start is forced to go [illegible]

The small bank system started by those States which were the hardest hit by the panic of the nineties has now been adopted [illegible] They are specially intended to finance small land holders and tenant farmers who are 40 per cent of all farmers in the United States. The last annual report of the American Bankers' Association shows that the National Banks of the United States had deposits amounting to $[illegible]074,000.00. The small State banks have $31,114,361,942.12, [illegible] billion dollars more than the National banks. This makes them the controlling financial factor in the United States. [illegible] the amount the banker is allowed to borrow is strictly limited by law, this makes credit available to the farming industry who have first call on the money in times of stress when credit is [illegible]

If [illegible] credit system had expanded to meet the emergency as theirs did, this vast sum would now be a domestic [illegible] foreign debt, and the $[illegible] interest money that [illegible]

[illegible]

The method is very simple. These banks [illegible] government guarantee. They [illegible] small keeps their capital at home [illegible]

If a farmer has a sickly family [illegible] the bank directors. They do not [illegible] credit of the community. They [illegible] as trustees [illegible] are bound to see that the money [illegible] secure its repayment. If a farmer [illegible] that fact must be known to the [illegible] that will take care of pigs, chick[illegible]

THE GUMPS
IT TRULY IS WRITTEN THAT REWARD SWEETENS LABOR –
CITY OF GOLD BANK
18 CARAT ST
18K
SIDNEY SMITH
THE OLD PROSPECTOR WHO GAVE CHESTER THE MAP CONTAINING THE PRICELESS SECRET OF THE CITY OF GOLD HAS LOST HIS MEMORY AND CAN FURNISH NO CLEW AS TO THE CITY'S WHEREABOUTS BUT OUR THREE FRIENDS REFUSE TO GIVE UP UNTIL THEY HAVE FOUND THE SECRET OF THE MINER'S MAP.
IT HAS BEEN WISELY SAID PATIENCE AND A MULBERRY LEAF WILL MAKE A SILK GOWN –
IF THERE WAS SOME WAY OF FINDING OUT WHERE THE CITY OF GOLD IS – THIS IS MORE LIKE A PUZZLE THAN A MAP –
IF THE CITY HADN'T BEEN WELL HIDDEN T'WOULD HAVE BEEN LOOTED YEARS AGO AND YOU MAY LAY TO THAT – THIS COMMONPLACE ONE BELIEVES LOVE, GOLD AND A COUGH ARE THREE THINGS THAT WILL NOT REMAIN CONCEALED –
THE CHART IS SO OLD THE INK HAS FADED OUT – IT WOULD TAKE AN EAGLE EYE TO MAKE OUT THE MESSAGE NOW –
THE WRITING IS BEYOND THE PERCEPTION OF THIS PERSON'S INCAPABLE VISION –
I KNOW WHAT I'LL DO, I'LL GET UNCLE BIM'S POWERFUL MAGNIFYING GLASS – THEN I BET WE'LL BE ABLE TO READ THAT OLD MAP –
THE MAGNIFYING GLASS, SIR, THANK YOU, SIR –
THAT GLASS WILL MAKE A FLY'S FOOTPRINT LOOK AS BIG AS AN ELEPHANT'S –
THIS ILLITERATE INDIVIDUAL PERCEIVES THAT MAP IS WRITTEN IN THE BEAUTIFUL LANGUAGE OF SPAIN –
OH, NO WONDER I COULD NOT READ WHAT IS WRITTEN ON IT – YOU TAKE THE GLASS AND TRANSLATE THE MESSAGE INTO ENGLISH –
THIS MAP WAS DRAWN BY DON PEDRO DE SALOVEZ IN THE YEAR 1520 – HE SAYS THE LAND OF MANY DANGERS IS EIGHTY DAYS MARCH FROM THE OCEAN – IT IS IN THE MIDST OF THE HIGH MOUNTAINS – IT IS ENTERED THROUGH THE VALLEY OF MYSTERIOUS VOICES THAT LEADS TO THE LOST CANYON AND DEEP IN THE LOST CANYON IS THE UNDER-GROUND GATEWAY THAT LEADS TO THE CITY OF GOLD – 400 YEARS AGO – HOW TRULY HAS IT BEEN SAID THE GREAT WALL STANDS, THE BUILDER IS GONE –
LET US QUESTION SOME ANCIENT PERSON WHO MAY TELL OF THINGS FORGOTTEN BY THE YOUNG – IT IS WRITTEN WHAT YOUTH LEARNS AGE DOES NOT FORGET –
GEE, I WISH THE OLD PROSPECTOR HAD NOT LOST HIS MEMORY –
OLD MARAKILA THE FORTUNE TELLER MIGHT GIVE US SOME INFORMATION – SHE WAS AN OLD WOMAN WHEN THE FIRST WHITE MAN REACHED THIS COUNTRY –
WE WANT TO KNOW DID YOU EVER HEAR OF A CITY OF GOLD OR A PLACE CALLED THE LAND OF MANY DANGERS? WHERE IS IT? HOW DO YOU GET THERE?
MY PEOPLE KNEW OF THE CITY OF GOLD COUNTLESS YEARS AGO – THE BONES OF MANY BRAVE WARRIORS ARE BLEACHING ON THE BURNING SANDS OF THE DESERT THAT SURROUNDS THE COUNTRY OF MANY DANGERS – THE CITY WAS BUILT BY A RACE OF PEOPLE THAT EXISTED WHEN THE OLD WORLD WAS YOUNG – THEY ALL PASSED INTO THE SHADOWS – EVEN THEIR NAME IS FORGOTTEN –
THE COUNTRY OF MANY DANGERS IS THE HOME OF WARLIKE SAVAGES – TO ENTER IT MEANS DEATH – TERRIBLE STORMS, MOUNTAINS THAT RAIN FIRE AND DEADLY REPTILES ALL COMBINED TO GUARD THE HIDDEN CITY FROM AVARICIOUS MEN –
WHO BUT THOSE OF ILL REGULATED INTELLECT DENY THAT A SMALL GIFT IS BETTER THAN A GREAT PROMISE –
THANK YOU FOR GIVING US SO MUCH VALUABLE INFORMATION –
IT IS WRITTEN A DANGER FORSEEN IS HALF AVOIDED – WE MUST GUARD OUR SECRET FROM ALL UNWORTHY ONES –
THAT MAP IS WORTH MILLIONS – MANY'S THE SAILOR MAN HAD TO WALK THE PLANK FOR LESS
LITTLE DO OUR THREE FRIENDS SUSPECT THAT THEIR CONVERSATION HAS BEEN OVERHEARD BY THE "WOLF" THE HALF-BREED LEADER OF A CRUEL BAND OF BLOODTHIRSTY SAVAGES –
